Turnpike Farm Market Bill Re-Introduced

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In an attempt to provide Pennsylvania's open market producers with an opportunity to market their products well, state Rep. Sheila Miller, R-Berks, has re-introduced legislation to allow farmers' markets along the Pennsylvania Turnpike system.

Though her first attempt to open up turnpike rest stops to Pennsylvania farmers' markets died with the last session, the Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission picked up on the idea and initiated a pilot program to allow farm markets at two locations.

Although neither agency consulted nor credited Miller prior to announcing their pilot program, she said she was glad they picked up on the idea.

Miller has a history of strong support for agriculture, both prior to and since being elected a state representative.

She said that after learning of New York state's turnpike program, she decided to seek a similar program for Pennsylvania and modeled her proposed legislation after the New York state program.

Now she has re-introduced her legislation to broaden the scope of the pilot program, since Pennsylvania's agricultural producers could use the benefit of more direct marketing of their products to offset the decline in raw-product prices of almost all traditional farm commodities.

A member of the House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee, she said in a news release that her bill is in that committee awaiting consideration.

She also said that Rep. Ray

Protecting Flock Health Focus Of Poultry Progress Day

ANDY ANDREWS

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Disease identification in broilers and layers was the focus of the annual Poultry Progress Day on Thursday at the Farm and Home Center.

Specifically, potential disease threats which face the growout and layer house managers are coming to the forefront, such as infectious bronchitis and reticuloendotheliosis (RE). However, the laboratories need more test input from producers in order to identify and treat the disease threats.

A disease that has surfaced in broiler houses throughout the region, and particularly in the Delmarva Peninsula, is infectious bronchitis. Vaccination against the infectious bronchitis virus (IBV) is becoming a challenge itself because of the appearance of unknown strains, according to Dr. Patty Dunn, DVM, animal diagnostic laboratory, Penn State Department of Veterinary Science.

WEST MIDDLESEX (Mercer Co.) — Two long-time, well-known Holstein breeders have been inducted into the prestigious Pennsylvania Holstein Association's Hall of Fame.

Harvey Stoltzfus, Morgantown, and Calvin Will, Berlin, received the association's highest recognition as the highlight of its annual convention banquet, held February 24 at the Radisson Hotel.

Berks Countian Harvey Stoltzfus left school at the age of 15, to tend to the family's farm when his father died. In 1962, he married Mary Jane and the couple began their Pennwood herd with 18 herd of registered Holsteins. They are the parents of four sons, Donald, Duane, Dwight and Glenn. Donald, Glenn and their families now farm in a family partnership with Harvey and Mary Jane.

Long involved in PHA leadership, Harvey has served as Berks County's state director, was a member of the Executive Committee representing the Southeast region, and has been a delegate for many years to the National Holstein convention. He has served as both a member and chairman of the state show committee and held numerous office and committee responsibilities in the Berks and Chester County Holstein clubs.

Trucklot buying interest was light. Offerings were usually sufficient to handle current needs. Traders were confused as to the overall effect of the lenten season on demand. Teacher Workshop Set GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — The 1995 Ag In The Classroom Teacher Workshop will be conducted by the Agriculture Awareness Foundation of Pennsylvania (formerly Pennsylvania Foundation for Better Living) the week of July 23-28.

The Adams County Farm Bureau will co-sponsor any interested teacher from Adams County who wishes to attend.

For many teachers attending, this will be their first introduction to agriculture within Pennsylvania. The program serves as an educational tool for teachers, which can help to bridge the gap between farmers and the public. It helps those who do not have an agriculture background to understand the broad scope of the industry and are introduced in creative ways of integrating agriculture into their existing curriculums.

A special emphasis will be placed on jobs relating to the agricultural industry. There will be hands-on projects that can be taken back and integrated into the classrooms. The activity-packed agenda includes tours of evergreen, beef, sheep, and fruit farms, supermarkets, a mushroom research center, and the dairy processing center, in addition to many presentations.

"The presenters gave the teachers attending a fresh perspective on agriculture through their demonstrations and take-home materials. The participants were very appreciative of the hands-on approach to learning. The demonstrations were easy to observe and many can be used in the classroom," said one attendee.

Anyone knowing of an interested teacher who would want to benefit from a valuable seminar, contact Tina Wilkinson, chairperson of the women's committee of the Adams County Farm Bureau, (717) 677-4477.

MAKING THE MOST OF YOUR STALL-BARN TMR

At Pennfield we recognize the benefits of feeding a TMR in a "Stall-Barn" to insure that all milk cows receive a balanced ration when feeding HAYLAGE, CORN SILAGE, HIGH MOISTURE CORN, and PROTEIN/MINERAL SUPPLEMENT. We also know that the fresh cows will do better if they receive a high dense challenge feed to meet their needs during peak production.

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds slowed slightly, but was generally good and sufficient to keep offerings in good balance to well cleared. Live supplies were moderate; weights were mostly light to desirable. Processing schedules remained very heavy despite some individual curtailment, mainly due to light weights. Less than trucklot asking prices were 1 cent higher at 51 to 62 cents. Trade sentiment was steady to firm, cautious at several plants. Boneless skinless breasts were in fairly good balance. Whole breasts were adequate for a slower call. Leg quarters were in good balance. Wings were irregularly available.

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE:

Prices were unchanged. The market tone was steady with some caution noted. Midweek demand ranged fair to good, mostly moderate, and was best where featured. Floorstocks were generally adequate or available, and barely adequate on large in the Ohio area. Breaking stock supplies were adequate for the irregular demand, and most breakers were satisfied with regular commitments.

National Grain Market

Wednesday March 1, 1995
USDA-Market News Service
Daily National G ain Summary

Cash wheat prices finished mixed, lower on light export demand and slightly higher in Kansas City due to indications that Sri Lanka and Tunisia could be in the market for wheat soon. Slight gains were made in corn pits from carryover export strength. Soybean prices moved slightly lower in sympathy with continued falling soybean meal prices and light profit taking on the board. Wheat mixed. Corn unchanged to 1 cent higher. Sorghum 1 to 3 cents lower. Soybeans unchanged to 1 cent lower. Wheat prices finished mixed with most traders rolling basis over to May contracts. Export demand has been slow for wheat this week and China's continued absence remains a negative factor. However, reports that Sri Lanka and Tunisia are seeking U.S. wheat, offered light sup- port. Corn prices inched higher again today, supported by recent good ex- port sales and light farmer selling. Light fund buying on the board added some strength. Minneapolis corn and soybeans re-entered the market today but bi ls are on buyers call and delivery dependes on the opening of barge traffic, approximately 20 to 25 days away. Weakness in soybean pits a reaction to the expected record crop in Brazil as harvest is reported to resume any day and weaker soymeal de- mand. Tight farmer holding of beans also added pressure to prices. Soyoil prices firmed, limiting price losses.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

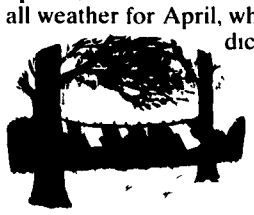
NATIONAL PROCRASTINATION WEEK.

EMBER DAYS

Every season has its Ember Days for predicting the weather According to folklore, the weather on each of the three Ember Days foretells the weather for three successive months. Originally set aside by the church for fasting and prayer, the Ember Days are the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday following the first Sunday in Lent, Whit Sunday (or Pentecost), the third Sunday in September, and the third Sunday in Advent. With Lent beginning on March 1, this season's Ember Days are March 8, 10, and 11. If the tradition is upheld, the weather on March 8 will forecast the overall weather for April, while the 10th and 11th will predict for May and June.



Some rain, some rest;
Fine weather isn't always best.

TIP OF THE WEEK

FISH ALMONDINE

1/2 cup slivered almonds
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 pound fish fillets
1/4 teaspoon dill
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Place almonds and butter in 8-inch square microwave-proof baking dish. Cook on high power for five minutes or until almonds are golden. Remove nuts and set aside. Put fish in dish with butter, turning to coat. Sprinkle with seasonings. Roll fillets, cover dish with wax paper, and cook on high for 4 minutes. Sprinkle almonds on fish, cover, and cook on high for 2 minutes or until fish flakes easily.

Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If it does not freeze on March 10, a fertile year may be expected.

So many mists in March you see, So many frosts in May will be.

OPINION

Chemicals Allow Farming Practices That Reduce Soil Erosion

For centuries, soil erosion has been the most serious side effect of our food production. Recently, modern chemistry has found a way to cut soil erosion radically; farmers can now control weeds with herbicides rather than the old bare-earth farming systems. We thank our country's farmers and agribusinesses for this advance, which is already being used on 100 million acres of this country's highest-risk farmland. As a result, future generations of Americans can look forward to less soil erosion, more wildlife habitat and a more sustainable world.

Dennis T. Avery writing in Global Food Quarterly, suggests that the above paragraph could be part of a point-of-purchase display in supermarkets' produce areas. Along with lovely color photos, such a display would make the food store manager's whole line of products look better to their and our (farmers') customers. It also undergirds the whole spectrum of modern mimimum-til farming systemns in ways that are crucially important to farming's regulatory future.

When you have a story that is as good as American high-yield agriculture's, it makes sense to take the message to the public.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Evaluate Small Grains

Most of the small grains went into this past winter in fairly good shape, according to Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent.

However, some fields show damage because of winter growing conditions and herbicide carryover.

Before fields put on too much new growth, it may be worth spending a little time evaluating them. Fields with a low number of plants will have reduced yields at harvest time. If the stand looks thin, spend time counting the number of plants at several representative sites in the field. This may require getting down on your hands and knees so individual plants, not stems or tillers, are counted.

Using a 10-foot tape or string, count the number of plants at 7 to 8 locations in the field. After the counts have been made, calculate the average number of plants at each location and dividing by the total number of feet that the plants were counted in.

The minimum number of plants per foot of row needed to produce an acceptable yield at various row spacings are 6-inch row — 7 plants; 7-inch row — 8 plants; and 10-inch row — 12 plants per foot.

In addition to having an acceptable average number of plants, fields should not have great deal of variations in number from one location in the field to another.

To Select Spring Oat Or Barley

Any time a plant variety is selected, the decision to which variety is chosen should be based on a series of selection criteria.

Spring oat and spring barley seed should be selected on several criteria, which include yield potential, bushel weight, disease resistance, plant height, lodging potential, and maturity date.

Based on Penn State yield trials, varieties ranged from 110 to 132 bushels per acre for spring oats. Bushel weight ranged from 30 to 40.8 pounds per bushel.

Data from these and other trials help you to select the best variety for you. Whenever possible, use the average yield over a three-year period. When looking at multiple traits, you may develop an index for each trait by assigning a percentage value to each trait. Have the percentages equal 100 percent. The most important trait would have the highest percentage.

For copies of various crop yield trials, contact your local cooperative extension office.

To Select Replacement Heifers

At weaning time, for most Pennsylvania herds, an important management decision will be made — which heifers will be retained in the herd for breeding.

Genetic progress is made in the herd by replacing older cows with heifers. The downside is that if there is a genetic problem, it will also be retained.

A first consideration for many breeders, particularly small breeders, is whether it may be cheaper to buy heifers rather than to raise them yourself. This will be particularly true if weaned or bred heifers may be purchased that are superior to those you are raising.

Most herds will routinely replace 20 percent or more of the cow herd every year. With half of the calves normally being heifers and realistically expecting only 80 to 85 percent calf crop, this means 35 to 50 percent of the heifer calves born every year will be retained.

Selection of heifers that are better than the cows currently in the herd is necessary to making genetic improvement. This implies there must be some measure of expected productivity to select the right ones.

Looking at in-herd weaning weight ratios is a good start to identify the heifers that have the high milking dams, were born early in the calving season, and may have the best genetics for growth. Heifers sired by bulls with high EPDs for milk, maternal weaning weight, and low birth weight will also be desirable.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Clear vision and the willingness to reach the highest goals mark a true leader."

THE SMART AND THE POWERFUL

THE SMART AND THE POWERFUL

March 5, 1995

Background Scripture
I Corinthians 1:18-2:16
Devotional Reading
I Corinthians 1:18-25

Last September we visited Budapest, Hungary. The last time we had been there Hungary was firmly in the grip of the Soviet power. We were fascinated to see the changes that had taken place with the fall of the Communists. We asked our guide whether he had had to study Russian. He smiled whimsically and said, "They taught us Russian, but we never learned it."

Despite the sheer physical and emotional power of the Soviet presence, there were things that force alone could not accomplish. The same is true of human knowledge. Our granddaughter, aged three, has demonstrated that she already knows far more than we did at her age. But will her generation's superior knowledge guarantee greater happiness, fulfillment, or success? Not necessarily.

There are two forces that drive society: the struggle for power and the quest of knowledge. Read the morning headlines and ask yourself how these two elements figure in news and seldom will you need to look further.

POWER AND KNOWLEDGE

Even in this day of relative peacefulness, the pursuit and use of sheer force enervates conflicts, struggles, wars, litigation, racial strife, and personal animosities. Our television seeks to persuade us that force is what settles most questions and disputes. At the other end of the spectrum is the quest for the ability to control the divergent forces of life by the power of the mind, a widespread assumption that ultimately any problem can be solved with the genius of human knowledge.

Both the drive to power and quest for knowledge can corrupt us. The ego that possesses the means of power or the understanding of knowledge, or both, tends to become arrogant. The powerful tend to look down upon the weak and the knowledgeable disdain the uninformed. In the long run, power and knowledge may bring despair, for we usually find that no matter how powerful and knowledgeable we are, there are abysmal limits beyond which they cannot carry us. You can raise an army and conquer a people, but you cannot subjugate them forever. You can push human technology to astounding levels, but with every victory there seem to be pitfalls and problems that defy your knowledge.

A STUMBLING BLOCK

The world, then, has not changed all that much since Paul wrote: "For Jews demand signs and Greeks seek wisdom, but we preach Christ crucified, stumbling block to Jews and folly to Gentiles, both to those who are called . . . Christ the power of God and the wisdom of God" (1:22-24). Paul said that the Jews looked for a salvation from the power of Rome, seeking a Messiah who would conquer with physical might. The Greeks, he said, looked for the solution to life's problems with the pursuit of knowledge.

You can see the contemporary parallels, can't you. On the one hand, the claim that political and economic power can solve our problems and fulfill our dreams. On the other, those who believe that the human mind has no limits. So, Paul's words are just as applicable today: "For the foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men" (1:15). The answer that God gave with Jesus on the cross may seem weak and stupid in light of what the world holds as powerful and wise, but the cross is the only power and wisdom that can save us, individually and collectively.

With redeeming, reconciling love both power and knowledge can avail us much. Without it, power and knowledge fail and corrupt us. That is why Paul came to the Corinthians deciding "to know nothing among you except Jesus Christ and Him crucified.

Weidman Retires After Lifetime With Pioneer

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — For the young man who at age 19 won the last official corn husking contest that was ever held in Lancaster County, the past 50 years of association with Pioneer has been one of enjoyment. John Weidman has announced his retirement effective the end of this month.

"Farmers are the best people in the whole world," Weidman said. "They know how to deal with mother nature and they know what it is to work with their hands. I learned more from them than they learned from me."

In the early days, farmers were planting 42-inch rows with 12,000 to 14,000 plants per acre. Most farmers were planting U.S. 13 and some were hill-dropping two kernels per hill. Later in the '60s farmers began planting in 38-inch rows. By the '70s farming became serious business and much more specilized.

Although farmers were slow to accept hybrid varieties until they saw the increased yield now 98 percent of the corn grown in the country is a single cross. With these new hybrids growers can expect to pick up at least one or two bushels per acre each year.

Weidman's first experience with Pioneer came when he spent summers between high school classes in Indiana at the Pioneer research farm helping to detassel corn. Upon graduation in 1945, Pioneer hired him to work out of the Mount Joy warehouse where he had a wide range of duties—deliveries, manning county and state fair booths up and down the East Coast, plot planting, and some selling.

In 1952, Weidman became an assistant district sales manager and a Pioneer sales agent: He became a district sales manager in 1955 and was named regional sales manager in 1957. He was a regional manager for the eastern division through the '60s, '70s and '80s. And he was named area sales manager for the eastern sales area when it was created in 1986.

"My greatest satisfaction has been to watch people succeed," Weidman said "In many cases, I'm working with the third generation

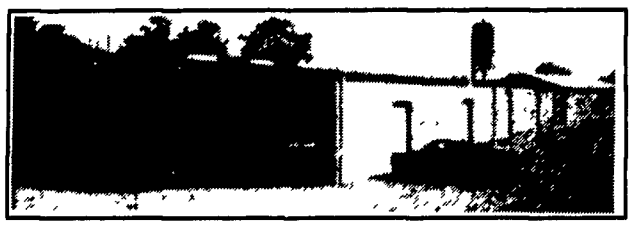
PARADISE TOBACCO SALES

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

We Couldn't Do It Without You!



ATTENTION FARMERS:
We will have demonstrations of tobacco stripping in October 1995 with approximately 100 lath of tobacco to strip.
We will have company men from tobacco processing companies here to help teach how to grade tobacco. We need better tips (that is the top of the stalk). If we continue to straight strip like this year. We will lose to the competition.
Please think about this example:
700 lb. skid of out grade tobacco at .60/lb - $420.00
at auction it brings $1.00/lb. - $700.00
That is $280.00 more per skid!
If the farmer has 10,000 lbs. to sell at auction with a charge of .02/lb. to sell, it doesn't take many skids to pay the difference!
So, farmer, please be considerate before you sign a contract. If you sold to country or auction, don't sign or contract for your 1995 crop. 1996 looks good for better prices.

FOR SALE: Hyster Tow Motor, 4,500 Lb., Late Model, Solid Tires, Good Condition. LP Gas

Liquid Manure Handling Seminar Set

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Today's dairy and swine producers are faced with the challenge of planning liquid manure management systems that are environmentally acceptable as well cost effective.

To help address this issue, Dr. Robert Graves, Penn State Extension agricultural engineer, is to be at the Franklin County Extension Office on March 9 to discuss managing liquid manure systems for large volumes of manure.

Topics will include manure application, pumping manure, irrigation system options, odor containment, maintaining good neighbor relations, etc.

Dr. Graves will highlight the key issues discussed at the two-day national "Liquid Manure Application Systems" conference sponsored by NRAES in Rochester, N.Y., in December.

The March 9 meeting is to be held in the extension office Assembly Room, in Chambersburg, beginning at 10 a.m. Adjournment will be at noon.

Producers currently utilizing a liquid manure system or contemplating going to such a system should find this educational meeting very helpful.

For more details, contact extension agent Philip Wagner at (717) 263-9226.

Industry Trends, What Can We Do?

DAVID SLUSSER
Pa.DHIA Manager

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The dairy industry in Pennsylvania is facing rapid changes.

We can react to these changes and live with what happens, or we can plan for the future.

Let's first look at the "big picture" of world milk production, the trends of United States milk production, and trends in Northeastern dairy production.

We need to project what we feel will occur over the next 10 years in the Northeast, and how we can positively affect these trends for the benefit of the dairy farmer in the region.

World Markets

As the nations of the world develop their economic systems, consumption of milk and other dairy products will increase.

Milk is high in nutrition, especially proteins and calcium, and, because of new technology and management skills, is very efficiently produced.

The dairy cow is a very efficient source of complete protein, both from milk and beef, and is very adaptable to many different climates and geographic conditions.

Dairy cows can play a major role in soil erosion control, because of their ruminative nature they can digest a wide variety of forages, which include grasses. These forages blend well in crop rotation programs, and grow well on land not suited for row crop and food crop production.

Animal waste can be recycled to the benefit of the soil.

Presently, the United States holds the leadership position in dairy farm management skills, and in dairy cattle genetics.

New Zealand can produce milk cheaper than the United States, but only because of the climate — they can pasture dairy cattle yearround. However, the island is small and can only produce a limited portion of the dairy products needed by the world.

The next most abundant source of economically produced milk is the United States.

The adoption of GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) hopefully will change the protectionist policies of Europe and Asia over the next 10 years. The United States government and the dairy industry need to work as partners to develop world markets for dairy products and dairy cattle genetics.

Our DHIA cooperatives must do their part to make sure our members will maintain this world leadership position in management skills and superior genetics.

National Trends

The dairy industry in the United States has changed over the last 10 years. Wisconsin is no longer the number one dairy state. California is.

Dairy cow numbers are growing the most in the Western and Southwestern states, while in the upper Midwest and in the Northeast they are declining.

Western dairy farmers can grow or purchase top quality forage from irrigated land, and their management skills are outstanding.

Cow numbers continue to decline nationwide, while milk production continues to increase.

Improving management skills, improving genetics and new technology (such as BST) will continue this change at an ever-increasing rate.

The move from government support programs to the free market economy will add speed and fuel to these changes.

Northeastern Trends

The Northeastern United States dairy industry appears to be faring better that the upper Midwest, however it is still losing ground to the West and Southwest.

The top five dairy states are California, Wisconsin, New York, Pennsylvania and Minnesota. As you see, two of those states are in the Northeast.

Cow numbers will continue to drop, however total milk production will probably continue to grow.

Holstein Breakfast Features Award Winners

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

WEST MIDDLESEX (Mercer Co.) — "The single, most important thing to have in your life is Jesus Christ," was the message ballplayer Sid Bream shared with fellow Pennsylvania Holstein Association members attending the association's annual awards breakfast.

"Some day what you have materially won't matter, but how you've served," he added, sharing his faith and beliefs with the more than 200 Holstein breeders and guests at the wrap-up event of the group's annual convention, held at the Radisson Hotel.

Bream, a native of Mt. Holly Springs, Cumberland County, is a well-known major league ballplayer and owner of Grand Slam Holsteins. His string of registered black-and-whites is housed with the herd of the Tim Sturgeon family, Fombell. Bream has played major league ball for 10 years, primarily with the Pittsburgh Pirates and then the Atlanta Braves.

Comparing baseball with the cattle and farming business, Bream reminded his audience that "how we think, feel and act is what makes winners." Winners, he outlined, must be confident in themselves, keep a positive attitude, stay focused, never give up, do their homework and always remember that winning is a team effort.

The personable ballplayer expressed his appreciation for the effort it requires to be in agriculture, citing honesty, integrity and good work ethics as qualities he especially admires in farmers. He also noted that he really loves working with his cattle and the opportunity to work out in the countryside.

Six individuals were cited by PHA for their efforts in soliciting membership for the association, by either signing up more than five new members, or more than 10 renewals. Membership solicitor honors went to Steve Dillion, Mercer County, James Houser, Jay Houser and Paul Hartle, Centre County, Dave Stratton, McKean County, and Willard Maust, show string is a familiar one at both local and state shows and has produced many class and show winners, including the 1986 Holstein Futurity Winner. Among the herd's numerous awards are many banners for Premier Breeder and Premier Exhibitor honors.

Harvey has judged shows across the state at the county and district level. He enjoys working with young people and has been a 4-H leader for nearly 15 years. The FFA has honored him with its Honorary Keystone Farmer Degree. Among his other agriculture leadership has been service as a director on the Red Rose DHIA board.

The Stolzfus family remains active at the Conestoga Mennonite Church, where Harvey has served on both the Fellowship and Cemetery committees.

A life-long dairy farmer, Calvin Will joined the Pennsylvania Holstein Association in 1950 and has remained active in its leadership to the present. A state director for many years, Calvin retired from the Executive Committee at the annual meeting, completing his term representing the Southwest Region. He was state convention chairman in 1967 and has held a variety of committee and leadership responsibilities at both the local and state level.

Married 49 years ago to Mary Elizabeth, Calvin and his wife are the parents of four children. Their three sons, James, Dan and John operate in partnership with them at their Northview Farm.

Willsholm Holsteins has long been recognized for its progressiveness in the registered industry. The family has organized and hosted four embryo-transfer sales over the past several years, with buyers and consignments from many states participating. Ag Progress Days was hosted at their farm in 1972 and they continue to welcome many farm tours and school groups who visit their well-kept and spacious farm facilities.

An enthusiastic dairy products promoter, Calvin has served on and chaired the Somerset County Dairy Promotion Committee for many years. He is a past president of the Somerset County Extension executive committee, has served on the Somerset County Fair Board and is a director of the First Philson Bank. History is an avocation of Will's and he is a member of both the Somerset County and Berlin Historical Societies.

Active in their local church, Calvin has been a teacher, member of the church choir and served as Sunday School superintendent.

Named Distinguished Young Holstein Breeders during the banquet festivities were Steve and Chris Wood, Littlestown.

The couple became owner-operators of their Penn Gate Farm in 1986 and milk 73 registered Holstein with a herd average of 21,466 milk, 879 fat and 730 protein. Their BAA classification average is an impressive 109.7, with 30 Excellents and 32 Very Goods in the herd. They crop 220 acres to corn, alfalfa and bromegrass.

Both Steve and Chris are extremely active in Holstein leadership and showing cattle. They were chaircouple of the 1994 state convention hosted at Gettysburg. Steve is a state director from Adams County, has chaired the state Show Committee and served on the Program Development and Evaluation Committee. Chris has served on the state Youth Committee, and both are active in local Holstein leadership.

Penn Gate's show string is often found at the top of classes at shows from the local to state and national levels and has won 49 All-Pennsylvania awards since 1987. They were named Premier Breeder at the 1993 and 1994 Eastern National Holstein shows and earned both Premier Breeder and Exhibitor honors at the 1994 state Fall Championship Show. Both Steve and Chris have judged numerous local and regional shows throughout the Middle Atlantic area over the past three years.

Steve and Chris have two sons, Clayton and Corbin. The Wood family are members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Dairy Shrine, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative and the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

As Pennsylvania winners, Steve and Chris' application will be submitted to the National Holstein Association for consideration in the National Distinguished Young Breeder competition.

Cargill is serious about corn silage. . .

our Pennsylvania customers are, too.

Since 1987, research from Michigan State University and Cargill data have scientifically verified what was long suspected: selecting the right-or wrong-corn hybrids for silage can make a big difference in your bottom line.

The research shows that most dairy producers can increase their earnings by better matching corn hybrid characteristics to their feeding needs. The work shows repeatable differences in important quality characteristics like whole plant digestibility, neutral detergent fiber, fiber digestibility, non-fiber carbohydrates and crude protein.

Here are comments from several Pennsylvania dairy producers and feed consultants about what Cargill's Forage Quality Program means to them.

RON BUTTERMORE
Mt. Pleasant, PA
(50 cows and seed sales)

The dairy producer has traditionally looked for corn that grew the tallest or had the biggest ear for corn silage. But Cargill's work has shown that there are other attributes that are very important to feeding quality. The more the cow can take in and digest as dry matter the more she's going to produce in milk, which means bottom-line profits.

WALLY YODER
Belleville, PA
(50 cows)

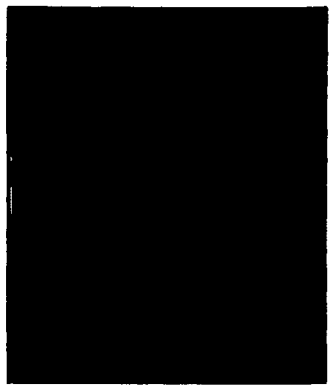
I feel that it's a very sound program. A lot of research and work has been put into these hybrids and the Forage Quality Program. Whether I'm using the program myself or go out and sell it to someone else, I know it is second to none.

DAVID MARTIN
Bellefonte, PA
(feed and seed sales)

This program has been of great interest to me because dry-matter intake is extremely important. It's also a program that allows dairy producers to utilize their forages in the best possible way. I have seen hybrids that looked great in the field but their quality was very poor. In the herds I work with, poor-quality roughage is one of the biggest limiting factors. Whenever we're having problems improving production, it's inevitably a problem from low-testing roughages and dry-matter intake is lower than it should be. If you're going to make it in the dairy business, you must have good quality roughage.

By planting hybrids selected for their feeding quality you will increase dry-matter intake, reduce your cost of purchased feed and help improve herd health.

DENNIS REIMAN
Berlin, PA
(150 cows)



Having a Cargill TEP (Tonnage Evaluation Plot) on my farm has proven to me that hybrids that look good in the field may not necessarily be that great for feed quality and good digestibility. I picked one hybrid that I thought looked like the best in the field and it turned out to be one of the poorest in digestibility.

Cargill has taken the lead in this cutting-edge technology. I appreciate the Menu system that they have developed so I can select hybrids that will best suit my operation.

I consider several factors when selecting corn silage, but good digestibility is extremely important. It appears to me that cows consuming highly digestible corn silage will have less stress and they can draw the nutrients they need from silage in a much more efficient way.

I never thought much about silage quality before Cargill developed this program. It has really opened my eyes.

I don't think there's anything today that a farmer can do that will be more productive for his operation than plant a corn hybrid that is highly digestible. The more forage the cow can utilize the less a dairy producer has to purchase off the farm and the more profitable his operation will be.
If we have a corn plant with improved digestibility we can get more fiber into the cow and at the same time keep a healthier cow, maintain production and also put together a less expensive ration.
As a feed consultant, a ration with digestible corn silage makes my job much easier because I know we won't run into some of the problems that we would have with less digestible hybrids. I've also noticed that higher quality forage will have a tremendous impact on the herd health of cows. The Cargill Menu helps provide consistency and stability in rations. Cows simply eat more with good-quality forages and that's why they move up in production.

RICK CRAIG
Everett, PA
(feed and seed sales)

As a business person, you must use all the tools at your disposal. This has to be something that dairy producers look at. I believe you have to start with a quality product to get maximum milk production.

Cash awards were presented to three county clubs that met membership goals. Recipients of $200 awards were McKean and Mercer counties, and Lehigh County received a $100 award.

Awards were also presented for genetic achievement and showring accomplishments by Holstein members.

All-Pennsylvania Awards went to 51 head which placed in the top of the 18 classes of the three major Holstein shows in the state with more than 1,050 total animals exhibited. Five of the All-Pennsylvania awards went to Steve and Chris Wood, Penn Gate Farms, Littlestown, three went to James and Nina Burdette, Mercersburg, and the remaining were split among 32 other exhibitors.

Progressive Genetics Herd recognition went to 63 Pennsylvania Holstein breeders, from among the 500 herds across the country on the DHIR testing program finishing with the highest TPI.

Sid Bream, owner of Grand Slam Holsteins and majory league baseball player, is awards breakfast speaker.

Forty-four Pennsylvania breeders received the prestigious Progressive Breeder Registry award, based on a formula recognizing production, classification type and percentage of homebred cattle. The Donald Seipt family's Keystone Farm, Easton, topped the longevity list of PBR winners at 37 years, while 10 state Holstein breeders were first-year recipients.

Northwest Holstein Breeders Host Annual Pennsylvania Convention

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

WEST MIDDLESEX (Mercer Co.) — The Pennsylvania Holstein Association is involved in more than 50 different breed, agricultural and junior activities, according to executive secretary William C. Nichol.

Nichol reviewed just a few of those programs in his report to the annual business meeting at the PHA state convention, hosted by the Northwest region, February 23-25 at the Radisson Hotel. Among them are the breed production and genetics recognitions which went to nearly 50 of the association's Holstein breeder-members during the convention's wrap-up awards program.

"The qualified herd book is now gaining importance as the world market develops," Nichol acknowledged of the national program identifying genetics of non-registered Holstein cattle. "And, there are many new options in identifying cattle and in the classification programs."

PHA continues to actively market members' cattle and genetics to international customers. Recent export sales included shipments to Japan, Korea, Ecuador and Saudi Arabia.

Continuing exodus of farmers from the dairy business is reflected in its effect on the membership levels of the state and national breed associations.

President Laszlo Moses reported a PHA membership of over 4,550, down in the past 12 months some 400 members. But, a continuing focus of the organization, according to Moses, is its active and varied leadership programs for youth members.

"We have unlimited equity in our youth," said the Greenville dairy farmer. He praised the parents who encourage and support their children to participate in such leadership activities, noting, "they are learning faith, hope and

Shaping the Future with the 4-H and FFA

CoreStates Hamilton Bank's Agri-Finance Department is proud to support 4-H and FFA members and their respective programs.

We believe that helping to preserve the family farm is one of the most effective ways to insure a better future for us all. And that involves working with and supporting our young people.

It's important to give them guidance, instill the proper values, and help them acquire the skills they need to be successful farmers.

Once again, CoreStates Hamilton Bank is pleased to support our future farmers.

Treasurer Dean Johnson reported PHA's 1994 total assets of over $900,000, with nearly $475,000 in member equity. Member equity was down slightly from the 1993 balance, due to a more than $13,000 deficit of income to expenses.

Two members of the association's executive committee were recognized on their retirement from the board after completing their terms of office. Plaques of appreciation were presented to Calvin Will, Berlin, representing the Southwest region, and Paul Lawrence, New Castle, representing the Northwest region. Elected to fill those positions are Rick Allen, Smock, Southwest region, and Jeff Raney, Adamsville, Northwest region.

Featured speaker for the meeting was Horace Backus, New York, noted for his pedigree expertise and auctioneering skills, and a partner in the Backus family's cattle sales and auction firm.

Backus reminisced about the people, places, sales and cattle that have crossed the Pennsylvania auction path in the past several decades and their contributions to the history and genetics of the Holstein breed. A historian and published author of Holstein history, he is planning an additional book further compiling the geneaology and legacy of the breed.

The milk-production advantages for this region are: one third of the U.S. population is located here; climate is favorable for milk production; terrain is more adaptable to forage production and grasses, and less to row crops and food crops; dairy farm management skills are outstanding; and the infrastructure of dairy farm support industries is strong.

Because of our geographical location to the populations, Class I sales (fluid milk) will remain strong, however milk sales for processed products will depend on the competitive management skills of our producers.

Since most international sales will be processed dairy products, and since these products will continue to play a major part in dairy products sales in the Northeast, we in DHIA and other related industries must do whatever is necessary to help our dairy farmers with management tools and dairy cattle genetics.

DHIAs, artificial insemination organizations, dairy cattle breed associations, farm consultants, and financial institutions need to work together in non-traditional ways to provide Northeastern dairy farmers with the best tools possible at the least cost possible.

They have to work togther to combine their financial and human resources to make this region of the United States highly competitive, and a strong part of the world dairy picture.

By working together, we can lead into the future, and not react to it.

Boyanowski Re-Elected President

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — Dennis Boyanowski, dairy farmer from Laceyville, was elected to his second term as president of the progressive Agriculture Organization (Pro Ag) at a recent meeting of the board of directors.

At the same meeting John Pardoe, dairy farmer from Forksville was elected vice president of Pro Ag. Yvonne Arnold of Dimmock was elected secretary and Louise Rinker of Forksville was elected treasurer.

The four officers of Pro Ag comprise the executive committee along with John Tewksbury of Meshoppen and Carl Hibbard of Montrose.

Newly elected directors of Pro Ag are Lazzell Watkins of Columbia Crossroads (Bradford County) and Donald Gregory of Dallas (Luzerne County).

The board also unanimously retained Arden Tewksbury from Meshoppen as manager of the organization.

Boyanowski stated that Pro Ag is working aggressively with the National Family Farm Coalition on sections of the 1995 Farm Bill.

MILLVILLE (Columbia Co.) — The Pennsylvania Emu Farmers' Association will be holding its first statewide meeting on Saturday, March 18, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the auditorium of the Centre County Vocational Technical School, Pleasant Gap.

Guest speaker will be Pierce Allman, executive director of the American Emu Association (AEA), Dallas, Texas. Allman will speak on the history of AEA, the emu industry, current events relating to the emu industry, and outlooks on the future.

State zoning will be discussed during this meeting. The state of Pennsylvania has been divided into eight zones, allowing each zone's emu farmers to hold local meetings and work closely with each other on a more personal level. It is the organization's hope that all emu farmers within the state of Pennsylvania will join in a group effort to spread the word on this wonderful growing agribusiness, cooperate as a group in educational efforts and in census counts.

Emu meat will be served at this meeting. Both current members and those wishing to join the Pennsylvania Emu Farmers' Association are invited to attend.

A nominal fee of $5 per person can be paid at the door, but those wishing to attend must register in advance by calling (717) 921-8377. To receive a brochure regarding this event, call (717) 437-9185.

Dunn told nearly 200 poultry producers and agri-industry representatives at the meeting that the University of Pennsylvania at New Bolton Center has been looking at 26 suspected IBV cases in the fall and winter of 1994-1995. Of the 26 cases, 20 involve broiler flocks with a mortality ranging from 6-23 percent. Of the 26 cases, 11 have tested positive for positive IBV isolation. Three cases are suspect, three cases are negative, and nine cases are in progress.

But what worries veterinarians looking at the disease is that six cases make up an "untypable" field strain. The cases involve strains that are not the typical Massachusetts, Connecticut, or Arkansas, but "a variant that has no name," said Dunn. In other words, the untypable field strain is different from the rest and veterinarians are puzzled as to how to treat it.

IBV onset in flocks brings about a host of health problems that lead to substantial decreases in market weight and increases in condemnation. The disease attacks the upper respiratory tracts of birds, which paves the way for lethal bacterial infections such as pneumonia to occur. When the birds are examined, they exhibit lungs filled with fluid. The lungs and heart are covered with a mucus-like exudate.

There are a total of 15 known U.S. and 24 known worldwide strains of the "coronavirus" that is IBV. Vaccinations are applied against specific strains and work well to boost immunity in the birds, but there is only a limited benefit of using vaccines against other types of strains that the vaccine was not meant for.

In Pennsylvania, the most common strains are the Mass. and Conn. types, and vaccines have been developed for both. Other common ones are the Arkansas, JMK, Florida, and Del. 072.

Producers should immunize at one day old and put a field booster in the water at about day 10. The important thing to remember, according to Dunn, is to get the vaccine from the bottle to all birds in the flock on the premise as soon as possible.

What worries veterinarians is the potential for the virus to change with the repeated passing of a certain strain from chicken to chicken. Of those six untypable strains, Dunn said it is unknown if the new strain is a result of a virus mutation.

Dunn said that Penn State has looked at three cases of IBV isolation, with one case in progress. A sentinel bird study is looking at the effects of the virus from selected pathogen-free birds placed in a flock to measure the effects of the virus in the house.

Perhaps in the future a vaccine will be available with multiple serotype protection, according to Dunn.

Another potential disease threat identified on some Pennslyvania flocks is reticuloendotheliosis (RE), according to Dr. Sherrill Davison, assistant professor, University of Pennsylvania, who moderated a panel on making decisions regarding flock health. What makes isolating RE difficult is that it mimics Marek's disease or lymphoid leukosis. Typical symptoms on birds include runting, tumors on organs, and general immunosuppression.

To further identify the problem and study ways to effectively treat RE, the state diagnostic laboratories (a consortium composed of the University of Pennsylvania, Penn State, and Summerdale) require producers to provide more blood samples from their flocks, according to Davison. The laboratories need to find exactly what the extent of the RE problem is in the state. Twenty blood samples per flock are required, according to Davison.

A potential disease threat identified on some Pennslyvania flocks is reticuloendotheliosis (RE), according to Dr. Sherrill Davison, assistant professor, University of Pennsylvania, second from right. Davison moderated a panel on making decisions regarding flock health. From left, Nelson Groff, Heritage Poultry Management Service; Phil Nuss, Esbenshade Mills; Davison; and Rick Meck, Wenger Feeds.

Other problems facing layer houses include mostly egg yolk peritonitis caused by E. coli, Salmonella, and staph bacteria. Also, common problems facing the diagnostic laboratories from flocks include oral ulcers, fatty liver, and Marek's disease. Also, enteritis problems, LT, MG, and other infectious challenges are diagnosed by the state laboratories.

For house managers who require assistance with flock health challenges, there is a wealth of information available from breeders, feed suppliers, and the three state diagnostic laboratories, according to Nelson Groff, Heritage Poultry Management Service. The best tool to apply for diagnosing flock health is the serology tests, according to Rick Meck, Wenger Feeds.

But it's important that veterinarians and flock managers get out and look at the birds and see what kind of conditions may contribute to diseases before making any kind of treatment recommendations, according to Phil Nuss, Esbenshade Mills. He told the representatives to listen closely to flock managers, "because one statement could provide the answer to a disease problem."

A videotape from Arbor Acres emphasized the importance of ensuring proper ventilation in broiler and layer houses. Many of those who spoke at the poultry meeting re-emphasized how crucial ventilation is to flock health and productivity.

But the winter of last year proved especially challenging to managers of curtain-sided houses who had to deal with what Thomas Pantano, broiler dept. of Pennfield Farms, called "ice machines." Condensation created walls of ice on curtain-sided houses that was difficult for managers to remove. As a result, many tried all sorts of ways to cover over the curtains to create environmental houses and to help insulate birds from last winter's bitter cold.

Also, managers had to deal with flooding as the record snowfalls began to melt last year. As a result, new techniques were put in place by many house managers to ensure that harsh winters don't create as

Atlantic Breeders Cooperative Announces Top Producers

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Atlantic Breeders Cooperative annually recognizes its members whose herds have produced at least 10 percent above the state average for the particular breed, while using at least two-thirds of the herd progeny sired by semen produced by the cooperative.

In an article published recently, the cooperative had announced that it was in the process of merging with two other similar sized artificial breeding cooperatives. This week, the cooperative's production award winners are announced.

Other topics covered at the meeting included research into controlling problems with ascites using restricted feed by Dr. Guy Barbato, Penn State; re-using poultry litter to save producers money and the importance of ammonia control in the first week of life to prevent eye burn by Hank Correll, College Hill Poultry, Fredericksburg; and research into using litter additives to reduce ammonia levels in houses by Dr. Mike Hulet, Penn State.

Also, Lancaster County poultry industry representatives Barry Shaw of Wenger Feeds, Paul Hann of Purina Mills, and Frank Baber of Dekalb Poultry Research looked at the future of the poultry industry in Lancaster County. Dr. John Schwartz, Lancaster County Cooperative Extension director, spoke about Act 319 and implications for farmers at the meeting.

York Spring Holstein Meeting Planned

Joyce Bupp
York Co. Correspondent

AIRVILLE (York Co.) — The Spring Barn Meeting of the York County Holstein Club will be held Tuesday, March 7, at the Eddie Johnson family's dairy farm, beginning at 1:00 P.M.

Program speaker is Dr. Larry Specht, Penn State University dairy specialist, who will speak on "Polled Genes in Dairy Cattles." The Johnson family has been breeding a line of polled Holsteins in their herd for several years.

Holstein members and guests attending the meeting will have the opportunity to view the Johnson herd in its new tie-stall barn, constructed last year following a fire which destroyed the previous facilities. Information will also be available on the Holstein Club's tentatively planned April bus trip to Franklin County.

The Johnson farm is east of Route 74, at the town of Airville; directional signs will be posted at the Route 74 Farmers' Equipment. Additional information or directions may be obtained by contacting Eddie Johnson, phone 717-862-3741.

Farm Toy, Winross Show, Auction To Be Held

ELIZABETHVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — The Upper Dauphin Area FFA, in cooperation with the Upper Dauphin Area Adult Farmers Association, is sponsoring the sixth annual Upper Dauphin Area Farm Toy and Winross Show and Auction.

The event will be held at the Upper Dauphin Area High School Gym in Elizabethville, on Saturday, March 25 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., with the auction beginning at 5 p.m.

Approximately 60 exhibitors from five states are expected to attend this year's show. The event focuses exclusively on farm toys, banks, and trucks. The collection of these types of toys is one of the fastest growing hobbies in this area and across the nation. Shows and sales such as the one to be held at Upper Dauphin Area High School give toy enthusiasts the opportunity to meet friends with similar interests as well as the chance to add to their collections.

For more information concerning the Toy Show and Auction, contact Roy Maurer at (717) 362-8181 or Terry Mauser at (717) 362-3575.

Christian Farmers' Fellowship To Hold Spring Luncheon

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) —Late March brings early signs of spring, and a day of spiritual preparation for farmers and the agricultural community. On Saturday, March 25, the Southeast Pennsylvania Chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Farmers will host a Spring Out- reach Luncheon at the Leola Family Restaurant.

It is open to all farmers and agribusiness people interested in Christian music, fellowship and inspiration. Keynote speaker for the event is Loren Kruse, vice president of Fellowship of Christian Farmers (FCF), International Kruse, from Ankeny, Iowa, is a founding members of the organization and the editor of Successful Farming magazine.

Kruse said he'll be speaking about "Rocks, weeds, flies and little foxes." That's the light-hearted title of his personal testimony about his growth in Jesus Christ. Kruse, who also manages his own farm, fits all of farming's challenges into four categories—rocks, weeds, flies, and little foxes. In an amusing, inspiring manner, he talks about how to have victory over them.

The outreach luncheon is an opportunity for people within the greater family of agriculture to gather in a joy-filled fellowship, said Don Hershey, president of Pennsylvania's only FCF chapter. Other testimonies and uplifting music also will be part of the program. Hershey encourages bringing friends who may not personally know Christ.

FCF includes farmers, agribusiness people and friends, and welcomes new members. It was formed to help build and strengthen faith in God through salvation in Christ throughout the farming community.

Registration for the Outreach Luncheon begins at 11:30 a.m. at the Leola Family Restaurants five miles east of Lancaster on Route 23 in Leola. It costs $7.50 per person, payable to Fellowship of Christian Farmers. March 15 is the luncheon deadline.

Mail reservations to David and Phoebe Bitler, RD4, Box 4176, Fleetwood, PA 19522, or call (610) 944-0541.

Southeast Pennsylvania FCF chapter still seeks additional sponsors for the meeting. For more details, contact the Bitlers, or Hershey at (717) 665-3808.

Lancaster Dairy Day I Features Indepth Review Of Mastitis

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The first in a two-day-over-two-weeks series of programs for Lancaster County dairy farmers was held Tuesday at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center and emphasized cow comfort and mastitis control.

Lancaster County Extension offers the programs annually as part of its service to the county, and they are strongly supported by area agribusinesses.

The second dairy day event is scheduled for 9 a.m., March 7, at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center with an emphasis on managing dairy herds for profit and stressing the business aspects of operating a dairy farm.

Also scheduled during the March 7 meeting is a presentation on weed control such as wild cucumber, spring redroot, and pesticide safety. Attendance is worth credits toward pesticide certification.

Tuesday's event started with an overview by Penn State Extension agricultural engineer Dan McFarland of cow comfort designs in barns and stalls, with an emphasis on ventilation.

Explaining the basic principals of air flow dynamics in barn construction, McFarland showed examples of cross ventilation and tunnel ventilation.

Tunnel ventilation has become more and more popular in recent years, especially in some of the older bank barns where location and construction make natural ventilation almost impossible, and cross ventilation impractical.

The key to ventilating any building is to remember the second law of thermodynamics, which paraphrased and in terms of air flow, is that air will always take the easiest and quickest path.

In other words, if the desire is to move air from point "A" to point "B," then there can not be any point "C" in between.

In applied terms, it means that in order to move air from one of the barn to another, there can't be any windows or major air vents along the side walls.

If there would be a side window open, the flow of air would "short circuit" and come into (or out of) the barn at the point closest to the fan.

To get good air speed in a tunnel ventilation system, both ends of the barn have to be opened up, with the exhaust portal about equal in ability to allow air flow as the inlet portal.

of families. Today we see more young people comming back to the farm because the operations are larger and farming is now a business challenge.

"I have also been working with younger people in Pioneer and this has kept me young. The future is going to be very exciting. Every decade has been exciting with many challenges. In the '90's we have more emphasis on biotechnology. Biotechnology will not replace the plant breeder but it will help us come up with new hybrids in a shorter period of time.

"Environmental issues cannot be overlooked on the farm. But farmers are already the best environmentalists in the country. Most people don't know that. But we have a lot of home owners who are doing more to hurt the environment with everything they put on their lawns. But the majority of farmers do a good job with nutrient management."

As a hobby, Weidman has a collection of farm tools and other items that have taken his interest over the years. Of special note and fitting to Weidman's interest in corn is a collection of about 50 husking pegs of all discriptions—bone, brass, spikes—even the thumb-through-leather peg that helped him husk out more than 38 bushels in 80 minutes in that early contest as a teenager.

Weidman and his wife Barbara have three grown children

"So many people have helped me in my life that are now in retirement homes," Weidman said. "I don't want to forget those people. I want to spend a lot more time with Barb and do some volunteer work in the community. The Lord put me here to serve and, as long as I can, I want to continue to serve my fellowman in the church, the community and some special projects."

Milk Marketing Educational Meetings

ALBANY, N.Y. — According to an announcement by Ronald Pearce, milk market administrator for Federal Order No.2, a series of educational meetings for milk producers has been scheduled for March.

In the January issue of the Market Administrator's Bulletin, the official publication of the federal order administrator, it was announced that Dairylea Cooperative Inc., and Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association Inc. have announced their schedule of educational meetings for all F.O.2 producers.

Four meetings have been scheduled to be held in two days — March 13 in Pennsylvania, and March 14 in New York.

On March 13, at 10 a.m., a meeting is to be held at the Mifflinburg School Administration Building, in Mifflinburg. A second meeting that day has been set to start at 7:30 p.m., in the Guthrie Inn, in Sayre.

On March 14, at 1 p.m., a meeting is to be held at the Ramada Inn, in Watertown, N.Y., and then at 7:30 p.m., at the Colgate Inn, in Hamilton, N.Y.

According to the published report, "As recipients of cooperative payments, Dairylea and Eastern are required ... to provide a series of services that benefit all Order No.2 producers. This includes conducting an annual milk marketing educational program for both cooperative and non-cooperative producers."

The intent of the meetings is "to provide Order No.2 producers with an opportunity to learn about current issues impacting the marketing of their milk."

Pearce noted that Eastern and Dairylea have been jointly conducting these meetings.

Several speakers are scheduled including Joe Mathis, assistant general manager at Eastern, and Ed Anna, an executive at Dairylea. Those two are to discuss the status of the federal milk marketing order program, and the perceived direction of policy in the 1995 Farm Bill.

Other speakers on line to speak are experts from Penn State University and Cornell University.

According to a recent news release from Eastern, the speakers at the Pennsylvania meetings are to be from Penn State and include Dr. Robert Yonkers, who is to talk about the "Dairy Situation and Outlook;" and Dr. Stephen Ford, who is to talk about "The Economics of Intensive Grazing."

On March 14, Cornell University speakers are to be featured and scheduled is Dr. Mark Stephenson who is to address the same topic as Yonkers, and Dr. David Galton, who is to talk about "Positioning for the Future in Dairying."

More Than 350 Attend Bradford Dairy Day

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

EAST SMITHFIELD (Bradford Co.) — A steady stream of farmers milled through the nearly 40 trade show exhibits and listened to informative speakers at the 1995 Bradford County Dairy Day.

Held at SRU Middle School, on Feb. 20, visitors to the event totaled well over 350, making the event a success, according to Lehan Power, area farm management agent.

Educational programs on dairy expansion and foot care were both well attended.

Gary Snyder, farm business consultant with Farm Credit of Western New York gave the morning presentation.

"You've got to say, 'Hey, I'm in an industry that's changing every day.' If you're going to expand, go through the stages," Snyder emphasized.

The first stage in Snyder's expansion plan was an investigative stage where one should visit as many farms as possible.

"Don't just look at the physical resources," said Snyder. "Stick around long enough to see how they get the jobs done right."

Next on Snyder's to-do list was budgeting to see if the project is feasible.

"If you can't budget, you can't manage a big farm," he noted.

Establishing limits is one key factor in this stage. Snyder suggests that farmers should "limit to their ability to handle change, limit to how many cows you will buy, limit to how much debt you can carry, and limit to how quickly you want to expand."

He also recommends being as organized during the transition as possible. Keys to remember are to start early, consider all environmental factors, get permits and use caution when buying animals.

Labor issues can also be a tough obstacle to handle. If the manager would rather milk the cows than manage his milkers, there could be a problem.

"If things aren't real good between dad and son, and you go into expansion, you're going to magnify the problem. You need to be comfortable now and understand where you are. Once you do that, you can go ahead with expansion. A manager is able to marshal the troops to get those people to take care of the farm business," said Snyder.

Perhaps the most emphasized point in Snyder's presentation was that farmers need to "grow in steps, but grow."

"A stairway expansion is best," he said. "Your business has to grow so you can remain competitive in the national dairy business."

Over 350 people enjoyed a lasagna dinner provided by the trade show exhibitors. Here, Curtis Scott, Duane Wilcox, Gerald Pratt and Matt Scott enjoy the food and fellowship.

He explained that growing doesn't only mean adding cows or more land, it means finding key areas where the business can get better every year.

"There's no one secret combination of factors that provides profitability in a farm business," he said.

The focus of the educational programs changed from expanding your dairy to preventive medicine as Dr. Dale Moore DVM, with Penn State University took the stage.

"Lameness in cattle is the third highest cause of involuntary culling," she said, as she began the afternoon program with a slide show.

"Not only does lameness cost

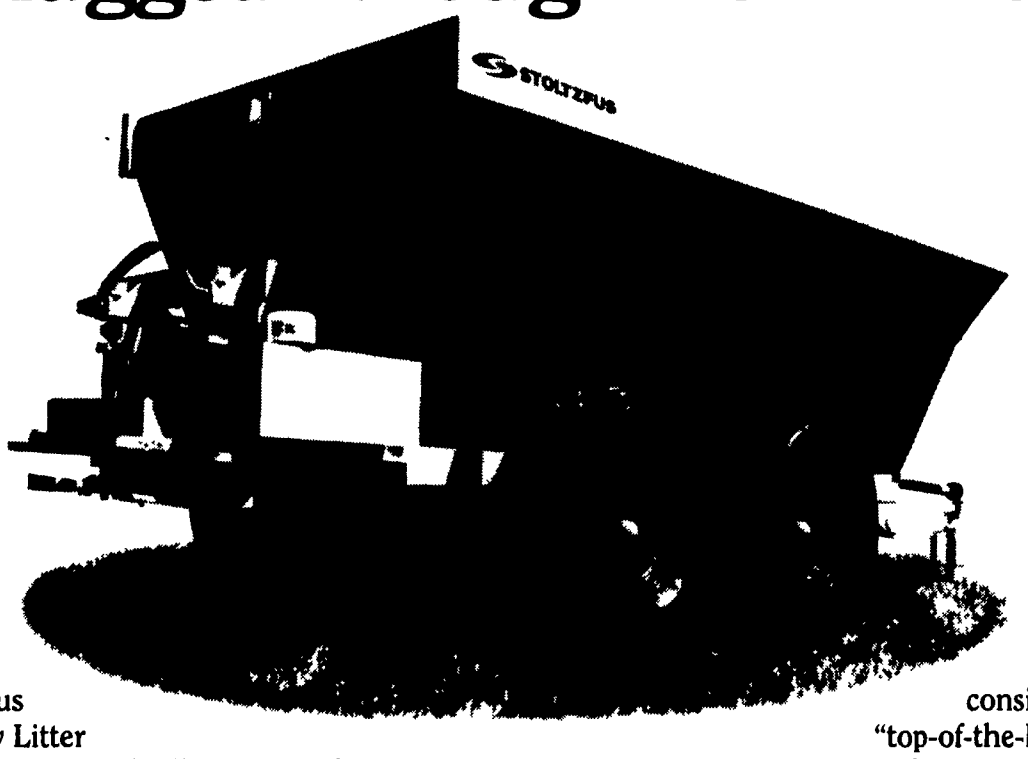
The One Spreader Big Enough For Poultry Litter, Rugged Enough For Lime.


The Stoltzfus Poultry Litter Spreader is specifically designed for the demands of this challenging job. The 20 foot hopper holds a whopping 400 cubic foot load, meaning fewer trips for you. The big 30-inch drag chain moves large volumes of litter fast. And the dual hydraulic spinners spread a wide, uniform pattern up to 40 feet wide.
But its real beauty may be its versatility. Now you can spread fertilizer, stockpiled lime, compost, poultry litter and more, all with one machine.
Long considered "top-of-the-line" ag spreaders, many Stoltzfus Spreaders are still in use after 20 years. That makes a Stoltzfus Spreader preferred not only for quality and performance, but also for terrific economy in the long run.
Sure you can settle for buying on initial price alone. But with a Stoltzfus Spreader you won't be shopping for another spreader just a couple years down the line.

Bradford Dairy Day

the dairyman reproductive efficiency, feed intake and the money it takes to treat the problem, it is also an animal welfare issue," she explained.

"There are three main reasons for lameness in dairy cattle: genetics, including the foot angle; nutrition; and the environment, including the surface the cows are walking on or bacteria present," she explained.

Other environmental factors include overgrowth, laminitis, corns, foot rot, digital dermatitis (heel warts) and heel erosions.

Using slides, Dr. Moore showed the crowd how a hoof is constructed and where problems arise.

The preventive medicine she recommended included maintaining a surface which promotes stable walking conditions, and regular hoof trimmings.

The objective of trimming is to shorten the toe and lower the outer wall. It is also to clean out the center of the foot so the cow walks on the outer wall of her foot.

"Heifers on a bedded pack should be checked at about six months of age. Hooves should be trimmed at least once as a calf or heifer, and mature cows should be trimmed once a year," she concluded.

Also on the list of speakers was Bradford County Dairy Princess Jani Burke. She told the group exactly what a dairy princess does and encouraged people to come out for the 1995 pageant which is scheduled for June 2 and 3, at Athens Area High School.

Consolidated Farm Services Agent Lyle Harding also addressed the gathering briefly. He encouraged farmers to apply for the dairy refund and noted changes in the crop insurance program.

The day's events concluded with time to visit the trade show and chances to win door prizes.

These safety glasses were not completely penetrated by a nail that was driven in at the force of 98 foot-pounds/second. The point of this experiment, according to Dan West, hazard abatement program manager for the New York Center for Agricultural Medicine and Health, is that personal safety devices can prevent serious injuries.

Ephrata Young Farmers Meet

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — The Ephrata Area Young Farmers met at the Ephrata Area Senior High School, at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 14.

Lamar Witwer and Kurt Kinderwater, agronomists from Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service, Inc. presented an educational discussion on alfalfa and corn management. They also gave answers to many questions which the farmers presented.

Many of the inquiries were in the use of chemicals which has become a major item for farmers, both economically, effective use, and being mindful of any contamination.

After a short short period for the enjoyment of refreshments, the business meeting was called to order by the new president, Leonard Martin. Invocation was led by Paul Bucher. The minutes were read by the new secretary, Luke Ray Zimmerman. The treasurer's report was given by the new treasurer, Robert Fox. Committee reports were presented.

Fred Weaver, new vice president, will be contacting individuals for the various committees.

Michael Brubaker, adviser, gave pertinent information on the water testing situation. It appears to be a rather complex program. The federal government made the law, but the very costly testing program must be borne locally and certainly will cause some raise in rates by those who must do the tests.

A discussion on merchandising the balance of the supply of Winross trucks was held.

Outside of school, Jonelle participates in the United Presbyterian Church Senior Choir, Senior Hand Bell Choir, and serves as director of the Junior Hand Bell Choir. She received the N.Y. State Farm Bureau Citizenship Award, Bausch and Lomb Science Award, Xerox Award and All-State Chorus honors. Jonelle will be attending a four-year college in the fall.

Tricia Hopkins of Fillmore, N.Y. was named first alternate state princess and received a $700 scholarship. Tricia lives on a 140 Holstein dairy farm owned by her parents, Ted and Judy Hopkins. Tricia serves as her school mascot, yearbook editor, and is active in many sports and school clubs. Because of her dairy princess experience, she has decided to study elementary education when she attends college this fall.

Anita Lant of Horseheads, N.Y. was selected as second alternate state princess and received a $600 scholarship. The 17-year-old senior is the daughter of Ross and Shirley Lant of Horseheads, N.Y., Chemung County. Anita is president of the Junior Holstein Club and is an active 4-H member of 11 years. On the family farm where they milk 170 registered Holsteins, Anita does chores and milking when available. After graduation, Anita plans to follow in her dad's footsteps and stay on the family farm to pursue her love of farming.

Other finalists were Beth Beckerink of Panama, N.Y.; Rebekah Cowles of Marietta, N.Y.; Cori Jaycox of Schoharie, N.Y.; and Carrie Gunning of Trumansburg.

Selection of the state princess was based on a personal interview, a 5-minute adult speech and a 5-minute elementary school presentation, both promoting milk and dairy products. The candidates were evaluated on their knowledge of the dairy industry, communication skills, poise, personality, and appearance.

Three speech awards of $150 were presented to Jonelle Smith, Rebekah Cowles and Beth Beckerink for their winning speeches and school presentations. Honorable mention for speech presentations were Cori Jaycox, Jennifer Osgood of Bliss, N.Y., Lisa Lilley, of Otego, N.Y. and Holly Howland of Candor, N.Y.

In addition, they created dairy promotion scrapbooks for competition. Beth Beckerink, Windy Rosiczkowski of Turin, N.Y. and Carla Schenck of Greenwood, N.Y. were each awarded $75 for the top three scrapbooks. Honorable mentions were Jonelle Smith, Tricia Hopkins, and Holly Rowland.

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. is a dairy promotion organization funded by dairy producers in N.Y., New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

MILK. IT DOES A BODY GOOD.™

Pfizer Holds Swine Service/Producer Meeting

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The North American Health Division of Pfizer Inc. held a swine servicemen's and producer meeting at Yoder's Restaurant, last Wednesday. About 175 people attended the meeting that included a family style lunch.

In the discussion of factors that affect lean growth in swine some of the significant contributors mentioned were health status, nutrition, and genetics. As pigs progress through the different stages of growth from birth to market, the type of growth they experience changes. Early in life, from 65 to 88 pounds, the pig is growing mostly lean tissue. Later on, at about 90 pounds, depending on genetics, its lean growth begins to level off until it reaches market weight.

Chronic disease represents a major challenge to the ability of swine to put on lean tissue, but disease does not have to be chronic to have a bad effect on growth. Mere exposure to antigens is enough to activate the pig's immune system. This activation is essential for the animal to combat disease but the overall effect of this immune challenge appears to be a partitioning of nutrients away from growth. Therefore less of the nutrients received in the pig's body can be used for muscle growth.

Nutrition also has a significant impact on the growth of lean tissue. Some of the most significant nutritional changes that producers can make include phase feeding and using medicated feed. Phase feeding refers to feeding several diets for a relatively short period of time during the growth cycle in order to closely meet the pig's natural decrease in nutrient requirements as it develops. In addition, as part of the phase feeding, split-sex feeding is another method to increase lean gain in hogs. Feeding barrows and gilts different diets takes advantage of their growth differences.

A pig's genetic composition, more than anything else, affects its lean growth capacity. No matter how well-managed the health and nutritional programs on a particular operation, the limiting element is the pig's genetics.

To different degrees, health status, nutritional factors, and genetics all contribute to a pig's ability to grow lean tissue. Modifying a production management system to improve any one of these aspects should lead to higher quality, more profitable pork.

Speakers on the program included John Reininger, Hatfield Quality Meats; Dr. Dreyfus Froe, director, swine tech service Pfizer NAAH; Dr. Tim Stahly, Iowa State University; and Dr. Billy Flowers, University of North Carolina.

Daniel Hughes, Sr. Sales Representative from Lititz was in charge of the meeting.

Ad Campaign Shows Concern For Environment

DENVER, Colo. — Influencers who read The New York Times, the eastern edition of the Wall Street Journal and The Washington Post will see how fish, beavers, and cattle are all tied together by Bud and Ruth Purdy's environment-improving stewardship in the beef industry's latest issue-advertising campaign.

The checkoff-funded campaign—which is part of the Industry Public Relations program managed by the National Cattlemen's Association (NCA) on behalf of the Beef Board—features a new ad, "A Creek Runs Through It," which will run during March.

Estimated to reach 2.4 million people weekly, the issue ad will showcase the environmental stewardship of Bud and Ruth Purdy, the national winners of NCA's fourth annual Environmental Stewardship Award. Readers will see some of the steps the Picabo, Idaho, couple are using to improve the quality of Silver Creek—the world-renown gold-medal fishing creek that runs through their ranch.

"It's important for Americans to understand that the environment is not a recreational getaway for cattlemen—it's their office," said Elaine Swiler, Cameron, N.Y., Beef Board member and NCA chairman, public affairs committee. "Cattlemen understand if they want to sustain their way of life, they need to be good stewards of the land. Our ad illustrates this to key opinion leaders."

The issue advertising program will also expand into radio. The nation's cattlemen will become sponsors of key opinion leader shows on National Public Radio (NPR) during the same four-week period. A tagline reading, "Brought to you by the National Cattlemen's Association and Beef Board, Stewards of An American Tradition of Hard Work, Quality and Conservation," will be heard by NPR's 11 million listeners.

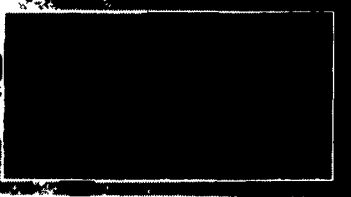
Times change.
So do we.

Times have changed! Alfalfa growers are demanding higher yields, greater persistence and varieties tailored to their specific needs. That's why W-L Research, Inc. has worked for over 35 years to develop and produce the highest quality, scientifically-bred alfalfa varieties. Innovative uses of NIR technology have created our family of WL HQ (High Quality) varieties that are guaranteed to outperform. And while new challenges and changes will make additional demands on alfalfa growers in the future, one thing will remain consistent: things change for the better with WL.

WL 322HQ for Dairy Cattle. WL 322 HQ delivers outstanding performance producing high yields of quality feed with consistently high levels of digestible protein and RFV (Relative Feed Value). High RFV translates into more milk production, better beef gains and greater profitability.



WL ProGrazer for Grazing. WL ProGrazer is specifically developed for use in either hay or pasture, but is especially suited for intensive rotational grazing systems where multiple cuttings and higher productivity allows WL ProGrazer to perform at its best.

WL 323 for Highest Yields. WL 323 is a high yielding variety that will provide excellent hay quality, especially on poorly drained soils. In addition to WL 323's high yield potential, it has excellent disease resistance ratings, including resistance to Phytophthora root rot.

Honey Producers To Meet

The Lancaster County Honey Producers Association will meet on March 14 at the Farm and Home Center at 7 p.m. Shown will be a video by Keith Delaplane, professor of beekeeping at the University of Georgia. Turnpike Farm Market Bill Re-Introduced

Bunt, R-Montgomery County, who is chairman of the committee, has "assured" her that he will schedule the bill for a vote on March 7.

"An alliance between the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission and the Department of Agriculture would provide for the operation of farmers' markets at turnpike service areas, tollbooth areas and other areas along the turnpike that are deemed safe," she said in a recent news release.

"Pennsylvania has a rich agricultural history. Along with this history comes an abundance of fresh produce sold at farmers' markets around the commonwealth.

"When I first introduced this legislation last session, it served as a catalyst to begin the dialogue between the Agriculture Department and the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission. As a result, pilot-project markets are being developed, one at the Allentown Service Plaza in Lehigh County, and the other one at the Sideling Hill Service Plaza in Fulton County.

"I'm hopeful my legislation will be enacted this session to assure the continuity of support for this program, regardless of any changes in administrations in Harrisburg."

Miller cited a potentially large direct market for Pennsylvania's producers. At the Allentown Service Plaza, more than 10 million cars stop at annually.

"A whole new consumer market could be created by providing these travelers with easy and safe access to Pennsylvania farmers' produce," she said.

Her legislative concept is to create a permit and licensing system that would be implemented at the discretion of the state Department of Agriculture. Permits to operate a turnpike farmers' market would be awarded on either a daily or seasonal basis.

"Providing a location to showcase and promote the variety and quality of commonwealth food and agricultural products to turnpike travelers is an effective way to increase much-needed revenue for Pennsylvania farmers," she said.

In the meantime, the pilot program started last year is developing, and pretty much along the lines intended in the legislation proposed by Rep. Miller.

Sharon Fulginiti, with the Commodity Promotion Division of PDA's Buruea of Marketing Development, is in charge of coordinating the pilot program and said that the Turnpike Commission is currently examining designs of a "pavillion" type structure that would be used to house the roadside markets.

The Sideling Hill site already has a proposed opening date of May 29, which is Memorial Day.

Producers already involved in the Sideling Hill Farmers' Market have come up with a proposed set of bylaws to govern the operations, tentatively restricted to Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday-holidays.

Presumably, those days of operation have been proposed because they coincide with peaks in tourism travel.

While applications for new vendors are still being developed, there is still the opportunity for people to become involved. Fulginiti said this week that she was waiting for more applications to market at the Sideling Hill location to come in, in response to phone calls from producers interested in marketing there.

She also said that the Turnpike Commission is currently in the process of drafting a design for a building, which is dependent on the number of vendors that are going to be able to market there.

(In the proposed legislation, there is no requirement for a building to be constructed, that is being done by the Turnpike Commission itself.)

Fulginiti said that small producers are as welcome to participate as are relatively large producers — "from a co-op to a very small farm," she said.

With respect to the Sideling Hill site, Fulginiti said there has been interest from a maple-products producer, vegetable and fruit producers, honey producers, flowers, apple cider, and fruit basket producer in marketing their products.

So far, in order to qualify for the project, those involved must grow 50 percent of the produce they intend to sell. If they need more volume to supply demand, then they are allowed to market additional, purchased commodities, as long as those additional commodities were grown in Pennsylvania.

Fulginiti said a group of producers organizing around the Allentown Service Center had their first meeting last week, and details are still developing.

The next meeting for the Allentown Service Center roadside market has been set for 2:30 p.m., March 9 at the Allentown Service Center, located along the northeast extension. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

The proposed application form for Sideling Hill Farmers' Market requests the farm name, the name of the main contact person and names of others involved in the farm operation, the address, county, and relevant telephone numbers.

It also requests a list of the major products intended to be sold through the growers' market; a description of the farm operation; and if the farmer also operates another retail farm market or pick-your-own fields. (This is not to be construed in any way except for understanding the perspective of the producer applying for participation.)

The proposed application also makes clear that all food safety, sanitation, health permits and labeling issues that apply to items being sold must conform with the requirements of the law.

Also, state sales tax is to be collected on products which are not eatable, as is required by law.

Miller said that she attended the first meeting of the producers involved so far in the pilot project site at Allentown, and is pleased by the interest and that the program is being developed by those who will have to live with the program and make it work.

She said she agrees with careful development of the roadside markets by the producers themselves, and that she wants the program to continue to be unfettered by political whims of government.

She has re-proposed her legislation, already reviewed by the Turnpike Commission, in order to officially authorize the program.

Ultimately, she said she wants the program to grow as big as it will through the initiative of the farmer-participants themselves, not through a government-created and mandated program.

For more information on the program, call Fulginiti at (717) 787-5086; or write to her at 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17710-9408.

1995 Dairy Of Distinction Farms Sought

Kingston (Luzerne Co.) — Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy Of Distinction Program of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program was first started in 1983 to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by. The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas and manure management are other aspects of the farm operation taken into consideration. Roadside judging is conducted during the month of May. Former winners of past years are also rejudged to ensure they continue to meet the standards of excellence.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk. Applications are available from your state secretary, Pennsylvania: Paul Nichols, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., 239 Schuyler Avenue, Box 5 , Kingston, Pa. 18704, (717) 283-2204, New York: Carol Weddle, N.Y. Holstein Association, 957 Mitchell Street, Ithaca N.Y. 14851, (607) 273-7591, or New Jersey: August Knispel, R.D. 1, Box 325, Pittstown, New Jersey 08867, (201) 735-4989. All applications muse be completed and returned by April 15th, 1995.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, plus Agribusiness organizations. The Pennsylvania Dairy Of Distinction Program is conducted with advice and help by Penn State cooperative extension.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance and other factors which can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane). Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for awards agree that; if selected they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to NEDFBP secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1). The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.
2). The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket shou'd be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3). Sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post and bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.
4). Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.
5). Replacement of damaged signs shall be the discretion of the committee.
6). No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expense.
7). Judges' decisions will be final.
8). Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st.
9). Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign.
10). Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee.

Lancaster Dairy Day I Features Indepth Review

Mechanical systems for moving air flow can be based on pushing air into the barn to force air out (a positive pressure system); or with fans drawing air out at one end (a negative pressure system); or with fans of about strength moving air through the building (pressure neutral system).

Barns built on ridges with good natural air flows can use cross ventilation to good effect. And in some cases, a combination of natural air flows and a mechanical system may work best, depending on the season and the situation.

In addition, McFarland said that since winter and summer seasons don't normally experience the dramatic changes in weather conditions as do spring and fall, that spring and fall represent times when some barns can benefit from the use of easily adjustable vents.

The location of vents should be designed according to the needs of the overall ventilation plan, not by convenience, and each setup should be considered unique when considering options and choices.

Dr. Lawrence Hutchinson, Penn State professor of veterinary science, and Lorraine Sardillo, an associate professor of veterinary science at Penn State who is involved in researching mastitis, discussed the conditions, and causes of mastitis.

According to Hutchinson, every dairy farmer concerned about the health of his cattle and his herd's profitability, should have developed and be operating under a specific mastitis prevention program.

Hutchinson said that according to data taken from Dairy Herd Improvement Association somatic cell records from across the United States, Pennsylvania had the highest reported average somatic cell count.

While that data could indicate that perhaps Pennsylvania dairy farmers have been more aggressive in testing for and recording somatic cells through DHIA programs, it is assumed that the higher incidence is more likely attributable to the fact that Pennsylvania generally fosters a climate that mastitis-causing microbes favor.

Much has been written about the two types of causes of mastitis — environmental and contagious.

Environmental mastitis is pretty defined as infections caused from the exposure of an open teat end to a variety of opportunistic naturally occuring bacteria.

Contagious mastitis is that which is caused by pathogens not typically found in the environment, and which can be transmitted from cow to cow through milking equipment, the hands of the milker, or any other practice in which something which touched an infected teat comes in contact with an uninfected teat.

Both mastitis experts said that bringing new cows into the herd can be a major cause of introducing contagious mastitis into a herd.

The rule of thumb advise given was that all new cattle brought onto the farm should be suspect of having contagious mastitis or whatever threatening disease until proven differently.

As a suggested practice, isolate new purchases and milk them last. (However, milking a cow last means that it has a greater chance of picking up an infection that already exists in the herd, so ideally, a separate milking unit could perhaps be used on only new cattle until a reasonable isolation period has passed and somatic cell count tests show no problem.)

Pre- and post-dipping with the a proper solution teat dip is always recommended, and both speakers emphasized the importance of following this practice.

Dry cow therapy, culling, cleaning machinery correctly, and maintaining a clean, dry environment for cattle will help prevent many incidence of mastitis.

Culturing milk samples from high SCC cows will also help farmers because they can start fighting any problems early and without wasting time using useless treatments.

According to Sardillo, high somatic cell counts not only result in losses of milk production and herd health, but correspond to increases in non-desirable components in milk, such as sodium, chloride and lipase.

At the same time, the production of desirable components such as lactose, casein and calcium is depressed in cows with high somatic cell counts.

Further, the experts said that a high somatic cell count is usually caused by contagious mastitis, instead of environmentally caused infections.

Sardillo also said that while the emphasis on preventative action plans for mastitis have focused on the environment, the pathogens, farmers have to consider that the cow is also a major influence in susceptibility to getting infections — if a cow is stressed and that stress reduces the cow's immunological response abilities, the mastitis is more likely to occur and become more devastating.

Sardillo also explained that mastitis is more damaging to the long term profitability of the cow than merely having a milk reduction during one lactation.

The milk-producing tissue in the mammary is damaged forever during infections, according to Sardillo. The capacity to make milk is never regained.

She explained that as the white blood cells attempt to pass from within the cow, past the milk-producing cells, in order to attack the invading bacteria, that the milk-producing cells are frequently destroyed. This results in lost milk-producing cells and scar tissue development.

She also said that tests have shown that as many as 90 percent of heifers have shown infections of mastitis bacteria before their first lactation.

Sardillo talked about some work being done on using dry cow treatment on first-calf heifers about 60 days before freshening.

However, while two area veterinarians said they have clients who are using the practice, Sardillo and Hutchinson explained that the majority of mammary tissue development in a cow occurs during the first lactation.

This is important because, while infusing with heifers with an antibiotic has been shown in some studies to reduce the amount of mastitis by half, there is still a question about how long antibiotic residues reside in this developing mammary tissue.

According to Sardillo, the possibility exists that farmers could end up with contaminated milk and that milk from heifers treated as such should be tested for residues before adding the milk to the bulk tank.

Further, unless a farmer uses artificial insemination, and can be certain of freshening dates, the farmer may end up dumping quite a bit of milk if the heifer calves earlier than expected.

Hutchinson, Sardillo and the practicing veterinarians — Brian Reed, with Hutchinson, Trayer and Reed; and Darcie Stolz, of Strasburg — also said that the use of dry cow treatment on heifers should not be done without the permission and guidance of an approved veterinarian, as the use of the antibiotic treatments is an "extra-label" use, and that it is illegal for lay people to use at their own disgression.

Especially with heifers, the insertion of the applicator tip should be restricted, and the teat clean so as to not destroy the natural teat canal protective structure, and so as to not introduce any bacteria into the mammary system.

Dr. Stephen Spencer, a well-known Penn State milking equipment expert, also discussed various aspects of equipment that can cause teat problems and how to deal with them.

According to Spencer, a common occurance with teats is the formation of a ring-like callous on the teat end.

Some people think, because of the appearance of the callous with a vacuum systems that the vacuum is actually pulling out some of the the inside of the teat end.

This is not true. The callous is formed because of the closing down on the end by the liner.

The key to preventing teat problems is to make sure equipment is clean and that vacuum settings, pipeline slope, pipe diameter, and liner type are all capatable. If the system was not designed correctly is will cause problems.

For more information on mastitis and milking equipment, contact a local extension office.

Two Tell How Their Stories Became Part Of Book

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Funny things happen to farm women. Terrible things also happen to farm women, but resilient bunch that they are, they look at the comic side and turn a potential tragedy into a hilariously funny situation.

A whole book compiling some of these stories is now available. The recently released book called "A Treasury of Farm Women's Humor," includes true happenings to farm wives across the U.S.

Two of the writers featured in the book have ties to Lancaster Farming. Bonnie Brechbill, a former Franklin County correspondent for the paper, and Marcia Garland, who sent in the notice that was published announcing the search for humorous essays, are pleased to have stories included in the book.

Bonnie said, "I've written more than 350 articles in the past 10 years, many of which have had a rather short shelf life. It's very gratifying to have my writing included in something as permanent as a book."

Marcia echoes Bonnie's sentiments. She's a correspondent for a daily Lancaster newspaper. But, to hold a book that contains a story with her byline, makes her feel more "established."

Bonnie lives on a 105-acre dairy farm with her husband Dwaine and 10-year-old daughter.

She said, "When I read the brief announcement in Lancaster Farming that said that Lincoln-Herndon Press was looking for humorous essays written by farm women about their lives, I figured that since I'm married to a farmer, that might qualify me as a farm woman. Being a surburban girl living on a farm in, of all places, Edenville, has certainly given me plenty of humorous experiences. I supposed I had as much of a chance as anyone else."

She sent in two articles and waited almost a year before she heard that both were accepted for the book.

One of the articles, "The 33,120-Minute Egg," is reprinted here with permission from the publisher.

But Bonnie has a confession to make. She said, "Not only do I not help on the farm, I'm not too sharp on animal biology, either. The last line of that story should read, "Prize is queen (not king) of the chicken house."

Life has changed quite a bit for Marcia since the time she first submitted her story, which chronicles her transition from "suburbian" to wife of a "would-be" farmer.

She and her husband Michael lived in New Hampshire then. They had purchased the small farm with a house that needed to be totally gutted so that her husband could have his dream of being a farmer.

Bonnie Brechbill holds Prize, the former resident of the egg in the story "The 33,120-Minute Egg." The story appears in the book "A Treasury of Farm Women's Humor," which was recently released by Lincoln-Herndon Press, Inc.

Like many farm wives, Marcia heard the words, "The house will have to wait. The barn needs work first to prepare if for animals."

When the barn repairs were completed, animals needed to be purchased. The saga of her naivete of keeping calves penned up in pasture, of castrating pigs, and of weeds growing two feet overnight is one that even a born farmer can empathize with.

After working on the house for seven years, Michael decided he wanted to go back to school to become an engineer.

After he finished his schooling, the couple moved to Lancaster County where Michael found employment.

Now Michael would like to buy a few acres to raise a few more animals. Marcia laments, "I never did get to live in the house when it was totally completed."

But her account of the house that at one time had 17 jacks holding it up, and where they could only crawl out of bed on one side for fear of ending up in the cellar if they tried the other side, shows how humor sustained her equanimity.

"I love to write humor but have had little of it published," Marcia said.

She has had a few of her humorous sayings purchased by a greeting cards company, but her main sellers are feature stories and articles published by local newspapers and some Christian publications.

Marcia said that it took three years before she had an article she had written published.

"I was pregnant and I jumped up and down for joy so hard that I went into labor."

Ideas for writing constantly churn in Marcia's mind but she has little time to sit down and write them because she home schools daughters, Hannah, 9, and Mary, 4.

"The house gets dirtier because they're never gone," Marcia said. But she enjoys the individual attention she is able to give to each child.

"I didn't intend to home school, but when my 4-year-old daughter asked me to teach her how to read, I did. And, I thought, "Wow, I can do this."

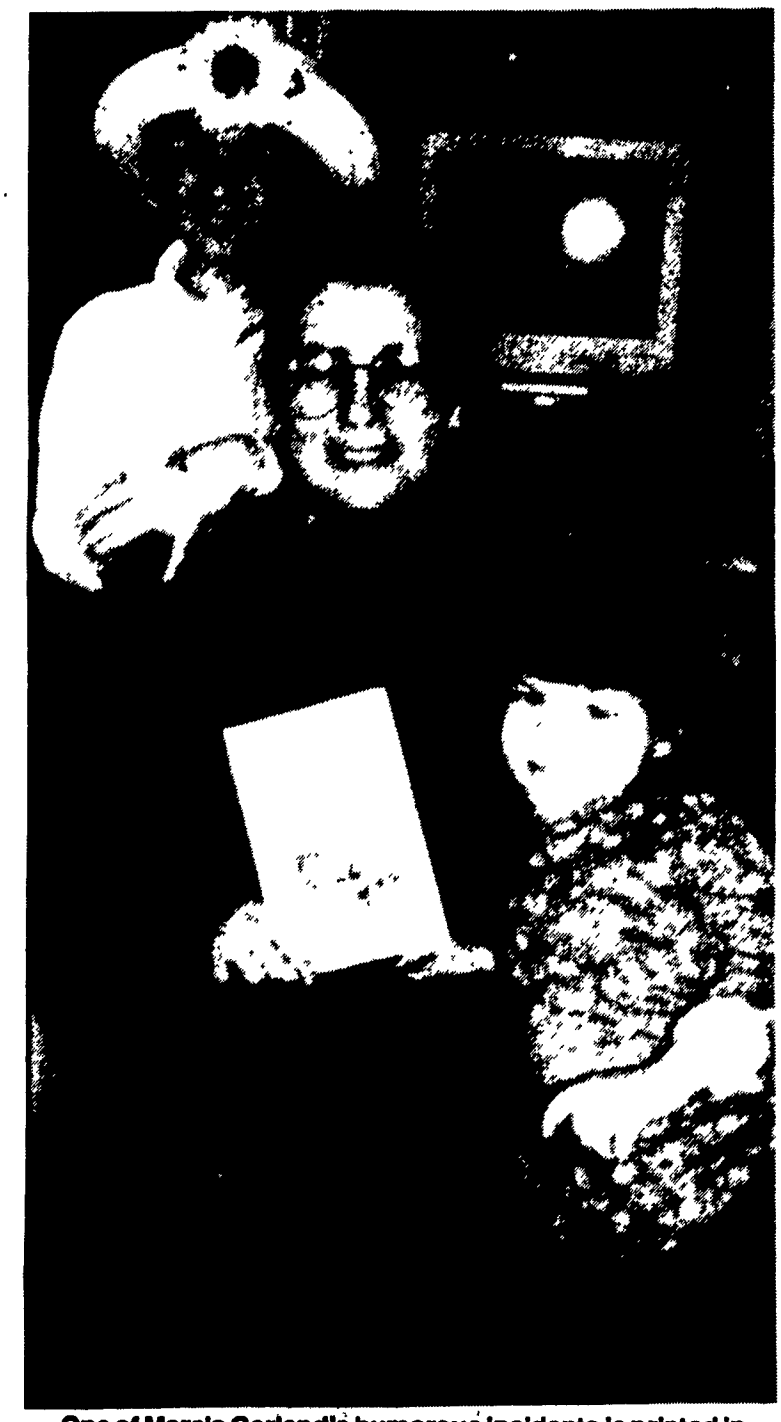
Marcia and her husband observed other home schooling families and were impressed by each family's closeness and the good behavior of the children. Now, the couple's oldest daughter is studying fourth-grade curriculum, one year ahead of her age level.

Teaching isn't confined to her own children. Marcia holds a writers' group for third through eighth grade boys.

"It's delightful. At first they didn't think they wanted to join a writers' group but now they want to come. Of course, I encourage them to write and enjoy it. I let their moms worry about the grammar and the spelling."

Bonnie's and Marcia's submissions were selected from hundreds of submissions that the publishers had solicited from farm and ranch wives from all over the country. The 284-page book contains from one to four stories from 63 women in 29 different states.

The book is available from B. Dalton Booksellers or can be ordered from Lincoln-Herndon Press, Inc., 818 S. Dirksen Parkway, Springfield, IL 62703. Phone number is (217) 522-2732. If mail-ordered, the prices is $12.95 per copy and $2 for shipping and handling for the first copy and 50 cents for each additional copy in the shipment.



One of Marcia Garland's humorous incidents is printed in the book, "A Treasury of Farm Women's Humor." Marcia sees humor in everyday situations and enjoys writing about it. She snatches pieces of time for writing in between home schooling daughters Hannah, 9, and Mary, 4.

The 33,120-Minute Egg

BONNIE HELIUM BRECHBILL

The phone rings.

"My mother chicken died," my neighbor says.

So sad. Flower-sending occasion?

"It's a terrible thing, brutally hard. She leaves a nest full of eggs." I hope the survivors can adjust to their loss. "You don't happen to have an incubator, do you?"

I remember a sixth grade project, a box with a fish tank heater mounted inside, with a glass panel in the front. A constant stink! I'm afraid it's still up in the attic. The box, not the stink. I promise to look. I find it. Too bad!

Mrs. Neighbor arrives with a huge basket of eggs. Thirty-six eggs?? No wonder the chicken died.

"No, no these are from all our chickens. They won't set on them. Poor, dear Lulu was the only one who would set."

The eggs haven't been washed. They're poopy. We put them in the box. They all fit. Rats!

"This is so exciting! Isn't this a wonderful project!" says Mrs. Neighbor. "I can't wait till they hatch!" She leaves. I disinfect my hands.

I'm a foster mother to thirty-six orphaned potential chickens. The incubator does the work. Except for:

1. Constantly adjusting the thermostat on the elderly fish tank heater.

2. Turning the eggs twice a day from the 2nd to the 18th day.

3. Providing humidity with a small gelatin mold full of water set amongst the eggs.

4. Cooling the eggs once a day from the 7th to the 18th day.

5. Breathing the stench.

6. Keeping the laundry room, where this charitable project is located, clean. A steady flow of visitors invades to marvel at the fortitude of the poor abandoned infants.

Nobody marvels at me. Too crowded to sort laundry. Husband needs clean pants.

Eight-year-old thinks fluffy chicks are in eggs now. I tell her they must gestate like she did. Sex education lesson. She wants to let fluffy chicks out right away. I restrain her.

Husband tries to lure me away for weekend fling. Can't go. Have to baby-sit eggs.

Day 12. Eight-year-old drops one while turning eggs. Stink increases. I notice while cleaning up mess that there is no sign of poultry.

Day 14. We get curious and open an egg. No chicken.

Day 17. We get suspicious and open an egg. No chicken. We open another. No embryo, no nothing. Another. Same thing.

Day 18. We start preparing eight-year-old for harsh realities of life. Keep fostering eggs. Do everything perfectly.

Day 21. We get nothing done because we run to incubator every 10 minutes so as not to miss miracle of birth. Husband is sure one in center moved. I saw one in back corner rocking. Nothing hatches.

Day 23. Early morning. One egg has a hole in it. Loud chirping issues from hole. Eight-year old eats breakfast beside incubator, calls us to come SEE every forty-three seconds. She reports each peck, each sliver of shell that breaks away. Takes me half an hour to get dressed; must run downstairs eight times for progress report on chicken.

9:37 a.m. Chicken pushes egg shell apart and lays flat on his stomach between other eggs. He is ugly. Eight-year-old ecstatic. Names chicken "Prize." "He's my prize for remembering to turn the eggs!"

Inform Mrs. Neighbor of blessed event. She relinquishes her parental rights. Prize is officially a member of our family.

Day 24. Waiting for brother or sister for Prize. Go to feed mill and buy 10 pounds of chicken feed.

Day 25. Hoping for siblings.

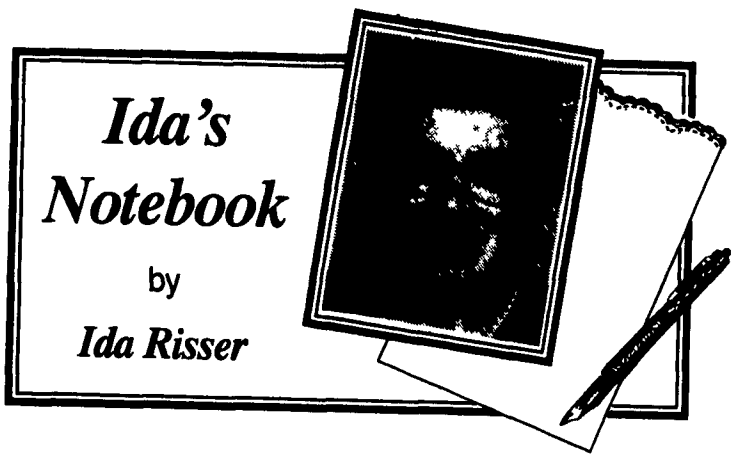
Days 26-34. Still hoping.

Day 35. Husband takes eggs way out into the woods and dumps them.

I make pot of tea. Pull down shades. Unplug phone. Go to bed.

Prize is king of the chicken house.

AGRICULTURE'S LEADING EDGE FFA



Recently we had several couples at our home for a meal. The conversation afterwards turned to roads in Centre County. It was amazing to me that they all seemed to be familiar with the area even though none of them lived there. Some had cabins there to hunt and fish while others looked for wildflowers. Allen urged them to attend "Ag Progress Days" there in August even though they were not farmers. And, I asked if they had visited "Columbus Chapel" in Boalsburg. We remember enjoying all of the items displayed there.

When our meadow was covered with snow, we watched children and adults sled down our meadow hill. There were a few spills but I'm sure they enjoyed the sport. How well I remember when I and my sisters walked up this same hill through the snow. One time we got off the beaten path and the sled stopped abruptly so that the top person slid off over me and I broke my glasses. I surely hated to tell my parents as money for glasses was scarce. Each time that we came down, we tried to go a bit farther — even into the woods on the opposite side of the meadow.

When our children were young, there were many other boys and girls of the same age living in a nearby building development. Then there were so many on our steep hill and sometimes they ice skated on the ponds in our meadow too. The Conestoga River, that runs past our farm, does not freeze over every year. The shallow ponds are much safer although even then our boys got wet feet occasionally.

We are planning a trip to Florida and trying to decide how many warm clothes to take as sometimes it is cool there too. So many attractions are in this state and so I'll probably be telling about some for the next few weeks.

They're back!

They arrived early one evening, as dusk was settling its shadows over the meadows. Sounding their unmistakable, trademark honks, the geese sailed in over the maple trees, circled around the bottom cornfield and splashed-landed on the big pond, where warming temperatures had wiped out the shallow ice cover.

What a racket—calling and flapping and splashing and paddling around—these seven full-grown, beautiful Canada geese created. You could almost make out their gleeful announcement, like children arriving home after school, shouting "We're home!"

Though we can't be certain, we suppose at least several of the arrivals are part of last spring's hatch from the mid-pond goose nest. They seemed familiar enough with the surroundings to move in closer the next morning, easing into the little pond which is just a few steps below the house and dairy barn. In the thick cattail growth along the water's perimeter, the geese find all sorts of gourmet goodies to fatten upon.

After dining among the cattails, they move up onto the pond bank to graze the sheltered spot beneath the willow tree. Here, the grass is already pushing tender, green sprouts—a late winter delicacy. Then, when their bellies are full, the big birds plop down on the soft grass to snooze in the sun, while at least one of the larger males stands watch.

Occasionally, the little flock will edge its way up the slight hill toward the dairy barn, where there are always bits of corn scattered about from hauling feed to the cows. As brave and relatively tame as these geese already are, it would not be much of a surprise to find them strolling into the barn to snatch corn from the cows.

Several days after the geese returned, a few pairs of mallard ducks arrived. While the geese routed another small flock of their own kind that attempted to land on the pond, they've tolerated the mallards so far.

This peace and calm is expected to last just until a mature pair of geese decides to nest. Then, we'll endure a couple of days of honking, chasing and general waterfowl warfare, until only the toughest, most persistent pair wins the territorial squabble and nesting rights.

Also returning—just when, where and how it pleases, thank you—is our semi-resident great blue heron.

Elephants aren't the only animals that never forget. The tall, lanky and leggy bird promptly upon its return took up watch on the bank of the little pond, where it could be found hanging out a couple of hours every day last fall.

Object of the heron's stalking is our growing school of colorful goldfish, offspring of a pair released into the pond a few years ago by a friend. Brilliantly colored, with a tendency to lounge about near the top of the water, these few-inch-long fish make easy pickings for the heron's appetite for sushi.

While weather predicting has traditionally been the responsibility of the groundhog population, around here, we're more likely to put stock in the return of the geese. And they seem to be staking out territory early this year. Start oiling your lawnmower.

Each participant must bring along a 12-inch by 3/8-inch round piece of last year's growth wood and a very sharp knife. There will be 30-40 modern and heirloom varieties to choose from.

Each participant will go home with two rootstocks and choice of wood, plus hands-on help and lots of useful information.

Registration is required by Monday, March 13, and prepayment of the $12 fee is required. Advocate For School Breakfast Addresses Concerns

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

BALTIMORE (Maryland) — "Breakfast is the most important part of the day," insists Dr. Doris Derelian, adding "that statement has lived on since the 1950s, but we had no real backup data for it."

Now there is factual data to back up those beliefs about the importance of eating breakfast, according to Dr. Derelian, the featured speaker at the annual breakfast meeting of the Baltimore-area Dairy and Food Nutrition Council of the Southeast. The annual meeting, to which the Dairy and Food Nutrition Council hosts area nutrition professionals and educators, was held February 14 at the Airport Marriott Hotel.

Dr. Doris Derelian, an advocate of the school breakfast program, promotes the use of whole milk in diets of children to enhance their learning abilities.

A Lawrence, Massachusetts research study conducted in 1987 compared achievement and testing scores of children following the introduction that year of the school breakfast program. Both tardiness and absences in the school were reduced considerably, while achievement scores increased.

"With school breakfasts, kids worked faster, had fewer mistakes, provided more original answers on open-ended tests and had more physical energy, " related Derelian, a bubbly, enthusiastic disciple of good nutrition. Current president of the American Dietetic Association, she is president of Health Professions Training, Fallbrook, California, and has a doctorate from the University of California at Los Angeles.

It is a fallacy that only kids from low-income families skip breakfast, Dr. Derelian emphasizes. The twin factors of not enough time in the morning and too many other competing activities create missed or low-nutrient breakfasts daily for millions of children from families at all socioenocomic levels.

"Transient hunger" is how Derelian labels the problem, as opposed to the chronic malnourished or undernourished child often seen in news reports of third-world or warring countries. A study done by the National Dairy Council found that between 28 to 33 percent of children arrive at school daily having consumed no breakfast.

Physical symptoms of skipped breakfasts include stomach pains and headaches, muscle tension, fatigue and sleepiness. Psychological and social symptoms range from anxiety and nervousness to fidgeting, anger, indecisiveness, confusion and general unhappiness.

"A 'brat' in school may only be experiencing these symptoms of hunger," Dr. Derelian warns. "Teachers have become good at detecting them."

Even children who do eat breakfast at home often experience the classic "mid-morning" slump, especially if proteins and fats are not included in the breakfast. For that reason, Dr. Derelian encourages the use of whole milk for children's breakfasts. Proteins and fats, both components of whole milk, take longer to get into the blood stream than do sugars and carbohydrates, such as might be found in cereals or toast.

A promoter of school breakfast programs, Dr. Derelian noted that the cost, usually in the range of one dollar, is generally lower than grabbing breakfast for a child enroute to school at a fast food drive-through and supportive of family values because it encourages good nutritional habits. School breakfasts, by law, must include servings from all the basic food groups.

"School breakfast participation is low because parents don't know or don't understand the program," noted Dr. Derelian. "It's too often viewed with the stigma that school breakfast is a program for the poor."

"The most difficult educational subjects are generally taught in the morning - and that's when kids haven't eaten," she lamented. "Kids need energy."

The Upper Chesapeake Bay division of the Dairy Food and Nutrition Council of the Southeast is headquartered at the Sykesville, Maryland, offices of the Coastal Division of Mid-America Dairymen, Inc., and funded by regional producer-members of the nationwide dairy cooperative.

A reorganization meeting of the board of directors of the Upper Chesapeake Bay division of the Dairy Food and Nutrition Council of the Southeast was held following the annual breakfast meeting. Officers re-elected were Jesse Burall, Sr., Monrovia, president; David Patrick, Woodbine, vice-president; Joyce Bupp, Seven Valleys, Pennsylvania, secretary; and Gary Brauning. Finksburg, treasurer. Also serving on the board are Ralph Strock, Baltimore, William Stauffer, Sykesville, and Pennsylvania members, Robert Grove, Greencastle, Paul Waybright, Gettysburg, Elvin Rohrer, Cochranville, and Emory Kilgore, Airville.

Home on the Range

Crockpot Specialties

Coming home on a cold winter's evening to the inviting smells of beef stew simmering in a crockpot is a welcoming feeling.

Crockpots or slow cookers are great for providing hot meals on a busy day. The Penn State Cooperative Extension warns that it is important to keep safety in mind when using a slow cooker or crockpot.

Because the heat is direct and is combined with steam within a tightly-covered container, the slow cooker does a better job killing disease-causing microbes than does long-time, low-temperature cooking in a conventional oven. Still, precautions must be taken to avoid holding foods in the bacterial danger zone (40- to 140-degrees) too long.

To maximize the safety of the slow cooker:

• Thaw meat or poultry in the refrigerator or microwave oven before placing in the slow cooker. If placed in the slow cooker while still frozen, meat may remain in the danger zone more than three hours.

• Keep perishable foods refrigerated until preparation time. If you cut up meats and vegetables in advance, store them separately in the refrigerator.

• Choose recipes with high moisture content for preparation in your slow cooker. Examples are chili, soup, stew and spaghetti sauce. Cut food in chunks or small pieces to ensure thorough cooking. It's best not to use the slow cooker for large pieces such as roasts or whole chickens because the food will cook so slowly that it could remain in the bacterial danger zone too long.

• Fill the slow cooker no more than two-thirds full. Heat may not adequately penetrate to all parts of the food if the container is too full.

• Keep the lid on securely. Since considerable heat is lost when the cover is lifted, remove the lid only to stir food or check for doneness.

• If possible, set the cooker on the highest setting fro the first hour or cooking. This will speed up the heating process. Then, set the control as directed in the recipe. If prepreparation time is limited, it's safe to cook foods on low for the entire time if the the food being cooked has a high moisture content and the slow cooker will heat water on the low setting to 140 degrees in two hours or less.

• Refrigerate or freeze leftovers. Reheat on the range or in a microwave oven, not in the slow heat of a slow cooker.

• If using a slow cooker to keep food warm for a party or buffet, bring the food to a boil on the range and use the slow cooker to keep it hot.

Thanks to tender American lamb and convenience food, Irish stew has just joined the list of quick and easy meals for today's easy cooks.

Stews taste great and are good for us but trying to find the time to cook a hearty stew is a challenge.

There are many shortcuts to make stew easy to prepare cand cut cooking and preparation time. Use prepared gravy for thickening. Substitute frozen stew vegetables for the potatoes, carrots, and celery, which will shorten preparation time.

The flavor of the stew will get better each time it is reheated. Make your lamb stew ahead, store in the refrigerator and quickly reheat to receive raves from your family and friends.

How To Grow Plants From Seeds

RUTGERS, N.J. — It is just about time to start slow germinating and growing plants like geranium, petunia, begonia or early plants like cabbage, onion, and snap dragons. There is some time yet before starting fast growing and warm crops.

Check seed packets for specific timing recommendations for sowing indoors. Remember the average last frost date is May 15 and plants that like warm soil — especially tomatoes and their relatives — are best planted after the end of May. Seed left over from 94 or before may or may not be viable — it depends on the species and on how the seed has been stored. If in doubt, avoid disappointments by sowing a dozen seeds on a damp paper towel. Roll the towel and place it in a plastic bag. Check frequently for germination. If half the seeds germinate within 2-3 weeks they are probably worth using.

Success with seeds means paying attention to any special requirements for germination noted on the seed packet. These requirements, if any, will most often involve specific temperatures and/or need for light or dark conditions. Certain seeds may be difficult to germinate and soaking or notching the seed may be recommended.

Gardeners who save seed from plants they grew last year also need to remember that seed saved from hybrid plants will produce an unpredictable, though not necessarily unpleasant, variety of offspring. Seed saved from plants that readily cross pollinate, like members of the squash family, will also produce unpredictable progeny.

Starting vegetables and flowers from seed indoors can be a gardeners delight or disaster. There are several keys to success. If one is critical, it's providing adequate light.

Seedlings need a lot of light to develop into sturdy, vigorous plants that will thrive in the garden. Even a sunny, south window is usually less than ideal. Of course, a greenhouse would be perfect, but a simpler and less costly solution is fluorescent light. A two-tube "shop lite" is an excellent plant growing fixture; they are often on sale and relatively inexpensive, too. There is no need to use special lamps; cool-white fluorescent tubes are fine for raising seedlings. If the fixture is hung with chains, it can be easily adjusted for height of the plants. Adding an automatic timer to turn the lights on and off makes things really convenient. Gardeners who have been less than successful starting seeds in the past should try lights, 14 to 16 hours per day, 4-6 inches above the plants.

Temperature is important, too. Many seeds germinate best at temperatures in the 70s even 80s, but most seedlings will grow best indoors at temperatures around 65-70°F, during the day and somewhat lower at night. Inadequate light and/or high temperatures produce the tall spindly seedlings that gardeners often end up with starting seeds indoors.

Seeds should be started and seedlings grown in sterile planting medium. Soil straight from the garden may contain organisms that cause "damping off," a deadly problem that can wipe out seedlings in no time.

ANSWER — Mrs. Daniel Mosemann, Summit Hill, wrote that her son and family live in Japan and do not have a bake oven or microwave. She wanted recipes for cookies, cakes, desserts, and casseroles that do not require baking. Thanks to Carolyn Matschulat, White Marsh, Md., who wrote that her grandmother made a recipe called Punge that they liked. Her memory of this delicious treat includes picking blackberries with her grandmother, but she also used many different kinds of fruit, fresh, canned, and frozen to prepare it. Fresh peaches and apples may required more cooking time when making the syrup. Thanks to Stephanie Eshelman, Denver; Kathy M. Van Nort, Columbia, and others for sending recipes.

Is Your Child Ready For Self-Care?

NEWARK, Del. — Sooner or later, there comes a time in almost every family when an elementary school child is left home alone. Self-care may be for a half-hour while a parent goes to the store or for several hours after school if both parents work outside the home.

Before considering self-care, parents need assurance that a child knows basic safety and security rules, said Maria Pippidis, cooperative extension home economics agent at the University of Delaware. Children need to feel confident and competent about being in charge of themselves and their home.

If you can answer "yes" to the following questions, you can feel more secure about leaving your child at home for awhile. If your answer is "no" to any question, turn it into a "yes" before leaving your child alone, says Pippidis.

• Can your child recite his/her name, telephone number and address readily, even under stress?

• Can your child accurately take a telephone message?

• Can your child accurately tell time?

• Does your child know how to use the telephone to call you or a neighbor?

• Can your child manage the tasks involved in preparing a snack, such as opening the refrigerator, opening a can, pouring milk or juice, using a toaster or getting water from the tap?

• Does your child know the name, telephone number and home of a friend whom he or she could contact in case of emergency?

• Does your child understand the following concepts: stranger, emergency, late, later?

• Can your child read and understand a written message or instructions you might leave for him or her?

• Does your child feel confident about being home alone?

• Does your child have good judgement about which problems he or she can handle alone and when to ask for adult help?

• Do you feel confident that your child will be safe while you are away?

Pippidis offers tips for parents of self-care children:

• Make your home as burglar-proof as possible.

• Remove fire hazards and install smoke detectors.

• Introduce your child to a neighbor who can be called if difficulties arise.

• Post emergency telephone numbers and familiarize children with them.

• Teach children not to display house keys or let a person at the door or on the phone know they are alone.

• Discuss what to do if a child loses a key.

• Call home at specified times.

• Encourage your child to discuss feelings about being alone.

• Consider a pet for companionship and security.

Five Kids Have Lots Of Fun

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

WINDSOR (York Co.) — Like most kids playing around in a barn, the five belonging to the Eveler family run around, chase each other and climb up and down the stacks of bales.

They also butt heads, stop to nibble at hay and crowd around their mother for a quick snack.

The five kids in the Eveler barn are baby goats, born January 24 to their four-year-old Alpine doe, "Patches." All five, four girls and one boy, look very much alike with their black and white markings. The girls, or does, are named Sugar, Spice, Cinnamon and Nutmeg, while the boy, or buck, has not been named since he will be sold.

Because five kids are more than almost any mother goat can raise all by herself, the Evelers feed extra milk in bottles to some of the hungry kids. Joel, 15, and Jolette, 11, and their parents John and Jockquin, all work together to help tend Patches' kids and the other goats in the family's herd of 36.

This was Patches' third time to give birth; she had triplets the first and second times she kidded. John Eveler found the quintuplet kids early in the afternoon, after Patches had delivered them with no help. Most of the kids weighed between five and six pounds. One was a little smaller, and another had some weakness in its back legs, but all five are growing fast and have lots of energy and curiosity.

Several of the goats in the Eveler's herd are 4-H projects belonging to Jolette and Joel, who started the herd when he got his first goat six years ago. Joel and Jolette are members of both York County and Harford County, Maryland, 4-H goat clubs and show goats at both 4-H and some open shows. Last year, Joel had the champion buck at the York 4-H Fair Roundup.

Joel and Jolette have found that goats make very interesting, and sometimes funny, pets. The family has a pygmy goat, a very small one, that sometimes climbs up on the house roof. Then Joel has to climb up and carry it back down.

Last year, they took part in goat races at Falmouth in Lancaster County. Joel and his pygmy-Nubian cross goat named Billy won their race. To race, the goat is handled on a leash and both the goat and owner must cross the finish line ahead of the other competing teams.

Jolette enjoys the goat-dressing contests. She won a ten-dollar second prize by dressing both herself and her goat as witches in the costume event.

"Like all kids, they get into trouble," said Jockquin Eveler about the interesting and very friendly goats. That trouble sometimes includes nibbling away at the shrubs and flowers around the family's home. One day, the goats got loose and found the feed supplies in the barn, munching down more than a half-bushel of oats before the Evelers could get them back into their pens. Joel is even teaching one of the goats to shake hands.

A special treat for Patches is candy. Just as soon as she hears the crackling of candy paper, she stops eating, perks up her long ears and comes looking for whatever sweets might have been wrapped in the crinkly paper.

All the goats also love to eat cookies and fruits, like apples and oranges, and vegetables like carrots and turnips. Out on pasture, they will nibble on not only grass, but shrubs and even briars and thorns, the Evelers have found. Because they enjoy and can digest all sorts of roughage, Joel and Jolette feed their goats fairly coarse, grass hay along with a sweet, high-protein, goat and sheep grain ration.

Since their goats give plenty of milk, Jolette decided some time ago to raise a baby calf on the goats' milk. She now wants to have her Simmental heifer bred so that she can raise more calves. Jolette also raises rabbits and is a member of the York 4-H Rabbit Club.

Tending and showing their animals are part of the diverse activities Joel and Jolette participate in as part of their home schooling program. Jolette is at the sixth-grade level and Joel is at the tenth-grade level of their studies, which include the use of computer and educational television.

The children also do many hands-on activities as part of their home schooling. Jolette enjoys cooking and Joel likes to work with equipment. He already owns a truck and a tractor and hopes to get into farming.

Someday, the Eveler family would like to construct facilities to enable them to milk and market the production from their does at their Country Critters farm. They also hope to continue expanding the goat herd to raise and market meat goats.

Jolette and Joel Eveler have their laps full with their five new kids.

These kids want to do anything but pose for a pesty photographer!

Join American Agri-Women

YORK (York Co.) — American Agri-Women have come of age, now that the organization is 20 years old, and are embarking on a new decade of growth and renewal. Revitalized by strategic planning designed to take them into the 21st century, the grassroots general farm organization is still made up totally of volunteers, but dedicated to the kind of positive action which normally comes only from groups with paid staffs and lobbyists. This is an organization farmers and consumers love to love, for AAW members get to the heart of issues and represent the interests of wives, mothers, lovers, protectors of family and values.

What makes them special? Founding mothers say, "We're it! When we go out to speak or testify on farm issues, we're credible, for we live and love what we speak. We are a coalition of diversity representing women in 21 state affiliates and 29 commodity organizations on various state and national levels filtering up from a ground swell of 50,000 movers and shakers who seek truth first and foremost in all issues." Their expertise ranges from fruit and vegetable to grain and fabric crops; lambs, cattle, cows, hogs, chickens and turkeys to health and nutrition; forests, flora, fish, to wildlife and conservation; they practice stewardship of the land and maintain discipline and hard work ethics in their families. They are dedicated to the preservation of the family farm system which they see as the bulwark of the private enterprise system.

A specific goal for the coming five years is to have an organized presence in each state by the year 2000. To do that, AAW is launching an all out campaign to entice women in agriculture, agri-business, government, on campuses and in cities, virtually anyone who needs to eat to join its ranks. The dues for this professional association have remained low in order to be affordable to everyone: $20 for individuals who join on their own; but just $10 for those who join through an affiliate.

A set of Prime Truth, Goals and Strategies has served AAW well since its inception and is available upon request. Major issues to be addressed in 1995 include private property, food safety reform and water quality. Anyone wishing information on how to become an American Agri-Woman should contact Gail McPherson (717) 362-4878.

Becky Fisher Gerhart, chairperson for the Pennsylvania Honey Queen Committee, shows off beeswax ornaments and candles that she makes. Becky is a former state honey queen who was nicknamed Queen Bee when she was a high school student. Now Becky is working on establishing her business named Queen Bee and Company.

'Queen Bee' Continues Bee Industry Promotion

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNTVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Becky Fisher Gerhart flits here and there in honey promotion but she's no fly-by-nighter.

After a two-year stint as Pennsylvania Honey Queen in 1980-81, she had only a one-year break before returning to become chairperson of the Pa. Honey Queen Association.

"I believe in the program. It did a lot for me. It gave me more confidence in myself," she said.

But the underlying reason for the efforts Becky contributes to the bee industry is for her father, Merle Fisher.

"Dad has worked so hard for the industry. He has done so much to help many beekeepers get established," Becky said. "I'd like to see the industry really boom."

Her dad is now 76 years old and still raising bees in what Becky refers to as "my parents' beekeeping dynasty."

At one time, her father had 1,200 beehives and was one of the first migratory beekeepers.

The Fisher name is well known in beekeeping circles. Merle was instrumental in reinstating the Honey Queen program in the state. Two of his 10 children and three of his 22 grandchildren have held honey queen and princess titles since 1975.

Becky's brother Dyson now has a bigger operation and travels from Maine to Florida setting up hives. Recently he took a tractor and trailer load of bees to California to work among the almond trees.

Becky's pantry is stocked with honey of all flavors and sizes. Although she does some baking and cooking with honey, she said, "I like every day uses the best. We (husband Dave and two children) like drizzling it over ice cream, cereal, and sausages. My children love warm milk with honey stirred into it."

She is especially enthusiastic about the new honey sticks marketed by her brother Dyson and his son Wade.

Sold in snack packs, the honey sticks come in multiple flavors.

"Instead of buying flavored teas, use regular tea and stir in a honey stick. It makes regular tea taste like blueberry, lemon, raspberry or whatever flavor you use," she said.

For years Becky has dreamed of starting her own honey company.

"I'm in my element in marketing. I enjoy promotion and maybe it's vain, but I wanted to carry on the Fisher name in honey," she said.

But Becky's dream for her own company has simmered on a back burner because her love for marketing honey is superceded by her love for being home with the couple's two children, Brock, 6, and Drew, 3.

"I don't want a business to interfere with my time with the kids. I'm willing to do with less materially so I can be home with the kids," she said.

Since she has a teaching degree, she does substitute teach occasionally.

Recently, Becky has been thinking of launching a business from her home and naming it Queen Bee and Co.

She said, "When I was in school, my nickname was Queen Bee. I thought it appropriate for a business name that would include selling Fisher honey, honey products, and homemade beeswax ornaments."

Becky worries when funds are low for the Honey Queen program. She said that funding comes from the State Beekeepers Association, which relys on profits from food stands at Ag Progress and the Pennsylvania Farm Show. Profits have been down in recent years because of weather-related problems.

"It's important to keep the program going. When people have the opportunity to taste the many varieties of honey, they really like it."

She considers it effective marketing for the honey industry.

ZUCCHINI SPICE CAKE

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon baking powder
3 teaspoons cinnamon
3 eggs
½ cup oil
½ cup butter
1 cup honey
½ cup sugar
2 cups grated zucchini
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup raisins
1 cup chopped nuts

Sift flour, baking soda, salt, baking powder, and cinnamon. Combine eggs, oil, sugar, honey, butter, zucchini, and vanilla in a large bowl and beat well. Stir in flour mixture. Stir in raisins and nuts. Pour into greased 9x13-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes or until finished.

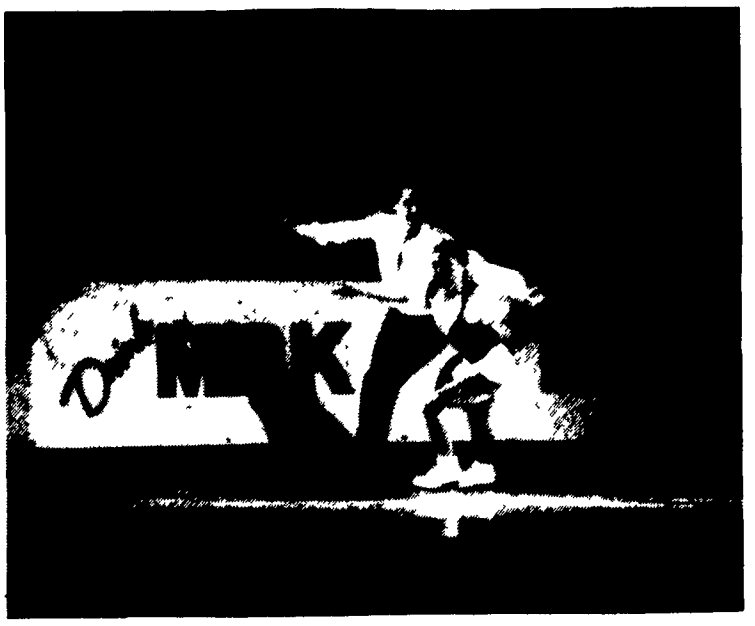
Dairy Association Promotes Milk At Ice Show

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) helped sponsor the 69th Annual Coronation Ice Show in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Marking the beginning of the winter sports season, the ice show featured ADADC's new advertising campaign, "Milk - Help Yourself." The ads were featured in the programs, on dasher boards in the ice skating rink, on ski slope billboards, and on the vests of ski competitors. While enjoying the winter athletic events, fans were reminded to drink milk.

The ice show featured Maia Usova and Alexander Zhulin, Olympic Silver Medalists and World Ice dance champions. Stacy Martin, St. Lawrence County Dairy Princess and member of the St. Lawrence Figure Skating Club, was among the skaters at the ice show. The daughter of David and Teri Martin of Gouverneur, Stacy has aspirations to perform in the Ice Capades someday.



The American Dairy Association was proud to present the 69th Annual Coronation Ice Show at Lake Placid earlier this winter. The new advertising campaign, "Milk - Help Yourself." was featured in the programs, on dasher boards in the ice skating rink, on ski slope billboards and on vests of ski competitors. Winter sports enthusiasts were reminded to drink milk while enjoying the athletic events.

Food Editors Find Useful Items On Menu

CHICAGO, Ill. — Food communicators attending a recent International Food and Lifestyles Media Conference got a taste of social and safety issues that affect meat purchasing, thanks to two sessions sponsored by the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

More than 80 members of the food and lifestyle press and free lance writers attended the conference, held in Las Vegas, Nev., recently.

The Meat Board provided speakers who explored factors in two areas that affect today's meat shopping patterns: food safety and consumer trends that are taking place in this country. Trends discussed include increasing ethnic diversity, an aging population and the rise of women in the workplace. According to Susan Parenti, assistant director of Meat Board Test Kitchens and Editorial Services, information provided will be highly useful to food editors.

"Food safety and social trends are areas of great interest, both to the media and the general population," Parenti said. "Within the meat industry, we understand the significance of these factors. Now food editors also have a better grasp of what the data means, in terms of the food we purchase and meals we eat."

Get Ready For Spring Gardening At Longwood Gardens

KENNETT SQUARE, (Chester Co.) — Throughout March, the gardeners at Longwood Gardens are sharing trade secrets during special demonstrations, talks, and walks. These timely offerings are part of daily visitor programs included with admission (except the Fun Day performance on March 18).

Longwood's popular demonstrations provide how-to information on gardening and a chance to talk with experts. "Sowing Seeds" on Wednesday, March 15, covers the basics of growing plants from seed. "Pruning Roses" on Wednesday, March 22, offers advice on pruning hybrid tea and floribunda roses. "Pruning Grapes and Raspberries" on Friday, March 24, demonstrates techniques to promote fruit production on young plants. On Friday, March 31, "Sharpening Pruning Tools" teaches visitors how to properly sharpen hand pruners and loppers. All demonstrations begin at 2 p.m. and last approximately 20 minutes with unlimited time for questions.

The slide-illustrated talk "Annuals to Grow from Seed" on Wednesday, March 8, at 2 p.m. is a great chance to relax before the spring rush and learn more about the wide variety of plants available through this inexpensive source. Visitors feeling more energetic will enjoy a walk on Tuesday, March 28, at 2 p.m. highlighting "Early Spring Bulbs" that are easy to naturalize.

The gardening bug may even bite kids during a visit to Longwood. A conservatory-wide plant hunt and the indoor Children's Garden are daily features throughout March. A special Fun Day on Saturday, March 18, includes a Pot-a-Plant activity where Longwood's staff and volunteers assist young visitors with selecting and potting a plant to take home. The activity is open to all children visiting that day at no additional charge from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. The Fun Day also features interactive performances by the Wilmington Music School early childhood staff for children ages 3-5. For information on this specially ticketed performance, call (610) 388-1000 exts. 100 or 452.

These gardening programs are part of daily events during Longwood's "Welcome Spring" display of 18 warm indoor gardens overflowing with colorful flowers and plants. In addition to more walks, talks, and demonstrations, there are Sunday afternoon concerts and weekday "Discovery Stations" on topics such as "Insect Adventures" and "Stuffed Topiary." For a complete schedule, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Schedule, Longwood Gardens, PO Box 501, Kennett Square PA 19348-0501. For recorded information from phones in the mid-Atlantic region (Connecticut to Virginia), call (800) 737-5500, or to speak to a Longwood representative, call (610) 388-1000.

March visitors pay half-price admission because of renovations in two conservatories. Through March 31, admission is $5 for adults, $3 for youths ages 16-20, $1 for children ages 6-14, and free for children under age 6. Beginning April 1, admission is $8 for adults ($6 on Tuesdays), $4 for youths, and $1 for children. Rates will return to the usual fee of $10 for adults ($6 on Tuesdays), $6 youths, and $2 children 6-14 when the Orangery and Exhibition Hall reopen.

Children can be gardeners and pot a plant to take home on March 18 during a special Fun Day at Longwood Gardens, Kennett Square. The day also includes specially ticketed performances by the Wilmington Music School early childhood staff, a conservatory-wide plant hunt, and the indoor Children's Garden, which is open throughout the year.

Take Control Of Your Money

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension is offering a free workshop "Taking Control of Your Money" on Thursday, March 16, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and again on Tuesday, March 28 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

This program is designed to provide basic information on money management, including the basics of budgeting and credit use. The information will help you and your family deal with the dilemmas and decisions regarding earning, spending, and saving money.

Financial success requires teamwork, so a family needs to talk together about money. Discussions concerning how to spend money, what the family's future needs are, when to use credit, and other issues are as necessary as organizing records themselves. In fact, if your family talks rather than argues about money, you will probably have fewer money problems.

To register or for more information, call Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 394-6851 by March 14.

Berlin-Brothersvalley FFA Holds Annual Banquet

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN, (Somerset Co.) — Some 200 guests and FFA members attended the 56th annual banquet of the Berlin-Brothersvalley FFA Chapter on the Thursday evening of National FFA Week.

John R. Hendershot, a 1955 graduate of the Berlin-Brothersvalley High School and its current head custodian in the elementary school, was made the 40th honorary member.

Hendershot has assisted the FFA in many ways during the past 11 years. Not only has he exhibited an efficient way of getting the job done, but always does it in a personable and friendly manner that FFA members have recognized.

Jason Baughman won first place in the one-acre corn growing contest (127 to 168 bushels per acre). Jonathan Dickey was second and Jonathan Smiley, third. Their trophies were presented by W. J. Brant Pioneer Seed Company.

Demonstration state gold medals were presented to Matt Coleman, Jonathan Dickey, and Jonathan Smiley. The team, which placed thrid at the state level, performed their demonstration, "A Treat For All Ages." Naturally, it was homemade ice cream.

Jonathan Smiley, the son of Jeffrey and Jane Smiley, Berlin, received the Keystone Farmer Degree pin.

Smiley also received a state pin for Gold Medal State FFA Delegate, as did the Brothersvalley FFA Chapter Scrapbook in receiving a state gold medal. A state pin also went to Jason Ickes, who received a bronze medal in the livestock judging contest.

Medals were presented to winners of the state agricultural record book. All bronze winners, they are Adam Shaffer, Bruce Hartman, Jeremy Walters, Joel Smiley, Jonathan Dickey, Joshua Koval and Justin Miller.

Chapter FFA Degree recipients receiving pins and certificates were Patricia Bird, Clarence Benning, Shawn Chonko, Doug Deaner, Brian Fisher, Bobby Meyers, Terry Oakes, Jesse Rogers, Brian Simmons, Joel Smiley, Brian Speicher, Donald Speicher, Larry Turney, Jeremy Walters and Bill Swift.

Chapter Scholarship pins and certificates went to Patricia Bird, Brian Fisher, Shawn Chonko, Jeremy Walters, Bruce Hartman, Dustin Glessner, Joshua Koval, Adam Shaffer, Travis Black, John Landis, Sam Petro, Spencer Glessner, Jason Philip and Ryan Taliaferro.

The county agricultural record book contest winners, receiving checks, were Jeremy Walter, 2nd, home improvement; Joel Smiley, 3rd, home improvement; Jason Baughman, 1st, field corn; Brian Gary, 2nd, rabbits; Bruce Hartman, 1st, rabbits; Jonathan Smiley, 1st, dairy cow; Joshua Koval, 1st, broilers; Matt Coleman, 2nd, dairy heifer; Bruce Hartman, 1st, dairy heifer; Bill Swift, 2nd, broilers; Jonathan Dickey, 2nd, beef finishing; Ken Benning, 1st, beef breeding; Clarence Benning, 2nd, beef breeding; Justin Miller, 1st on-farm employment; Adam Shaffer, 1st, on-farm employment; and Daryl Gindlesperger, 3rd, on-farm employment.

Plaques were presented to Berlin-Brothersvally Young Farmer Keith Leydig, Outstanding Young Farmer under 30 years of age and Brad Fox, Outstanding Young Farmer over 30 years of age.

Julie Will, daughter of John and Connie Will, Berlin R1, was presented with the FFA Sweetheart Award.

Kelli Zeigler, Cumberland County, state FFA south central vice president, gave an address following award presentations. She was accompanied by Heidi Dahlhammer, York County, state FFA secretary.

Zeigler said that agriculture affects everybody, either through what we eat, what we wear, or what we build.

She encouraged the banquet guests to "Listen. Opportunity sometimes knocks very softly."

She ended, saying, "There's no security on this earth — only opportunity."

Doyle Paul is the Berlin-Brothersvalley FFA adviser. His agricultural aide is Roxann Leydig.

Winners in the one-acre corn growing contest are Berlin-Brothersvalley FFA members, from left, Jonathan Dickey, second; Jason Baughman, first, and Jonathan Smiley, third.

John Hendershot, left, Berlin, was named the 40th Honorary Member of the Berlin-Brothersvalley Future Farmers Of America at their annual banquet. He's being congratulated by the Chapter president, Jonathan Smiley.

Beef Aroma Greets Magazine Readers

CHICAGO, Il. — Restaurant operators might be more inclined to add more beef to their menus if they could smell the wonderful aroma of beef dishes advertised in their trade magazines. Now they can.

Beginning in February, the Beef Industry Council (BIC) is placing an ad in major foodservice publications that allows foodservice operators to smell the advertised product. The checkoff-funded ad uses "scratch and sniff" technology, which was first developed for the perfume industry, to give readers an aroma of a Steak Vesuvio recipe, featuring a T-bone steak.

The Steak Vesuvio ad is one in a series of four ads that encourages foodservice operators to add more beef to their menus. Others in the series are the Earth and Turf Steak (tenderloin), Steak Caesar Sandwich (thin cut ribeye) and a Black Jack Burger. Ads will run continually in the magazines through September.

Magazines to run the ads are Nation's Restaurant News, Restaurant Business, Restaurant Hospitality, Restaurants & Institutions and Food Arts. Combined circulation for the publications is more than 520,000.

Penn State Program Promotes Breast Feeding

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — One of the most important things a new mother can do for her baby is breast-feed. Yet statistics from the 1993 Healthy People 2000 Review show that only 54 percent of women in the United States breast-fed shortly after their babies were born. Five to six months after giving birth, only 19 percent were breast-feeding.

An even smaller percentage of low-income mothers breast-feed their babies. In 1992, the number of breast-feeding women enrolled statewide in WIC, the federally funded supplemental feeding program, was about 25 percent. The average length of time these women breast-fed was less than seven weeks.

A new Penn State program may help to change this. "The key is to educate women and provide encouragement," says Judith Heald, registered dietitian and manager of the federally funded Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP) at Penn State. Heald helped develop the Breast-Feeding Peer Counselor Program, administered in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Many women are convinced that breast-feeding is difficult and inconvenient," Heald says. "Others don't even consider breast-feeding because they know so little about it. When the women around them aren't breast-feeding and aren't encouraging them to do it, it's unlikely they'll even try."

Heald developed Penn State's Breast-Feeding Peer Counselor Program with Dr. Madeleine Sigman-Grant, assistant professor of food science and registered dietitian, and graduate student Meg Schmidt. Begun last year, the program provides information and support for women in the state who want to learn to breast-feed.

"The U.S. Public Health Service wants to increase the number of new breast-feeding mothers to at least 75 percent, and the number of mothers breast-feeding until their babies are five to six months old to at least 50 percent," says Sigman-Grant. "The Peer Counselor Program is an important part of that effort in Pennsylvania."

Participants in the Breast-Feeding Peer Counselor Program are recruited from pregnancy classes and hospitals. EFNEP nutrition education advisers, who have been trained as breast-feeding educators, visit these women in their homes both before and after their babies are born.

"These are crucial times for new mothers," says Judith Wahl, breast-feeding educator in Blair County. "Their bodies are going through dramatic changes, and without advice and encouragement, they may think there is something wrong with them and decide they can't breast-feed.

"If we can help women at these early stages, many of them should have little trouble," Wahl says. "The women are very excited when they hear that I'll come and speak with them in their homes. It's important for them to have someone they can talk with face-to-face. Bottle-feeding has been considered the best choice for so long that breast-feeding is a mystery to a lot of women. We want it to make a comeback."

Participants who successfully breast-feed can receive training to become peer counselors. "When enough mothers take part in the program, there will be a tremendous amount of community support," says Heald.

The program also educates women about the many benefits of breast-feeding. "Breast milk contains important proteins, minerals and vitamins," says Sigman-Grant. "It has antibodies to help newborns fend off infections and nutrients for tissue development and growth."

Breast-feeding also is more economical than feeding infant formula and may help women return to their pre-pregnancy weights more quickly. " At the same time, it strengthens the bond between mother and baby, which is important for the child's emotional development," says Grant.

The Breast-Feeding Peer Counselor Program currently is available in Blair, Bradford, Carbon, Columbia, Huntingdon, Lackawanna, Northampton, Northumberland, Pike, Snyder, Tioga and Union counties. For more information about the program, contact Judith Heald at (814) 863-3447.

Retirement Planning

RUTGERS, N.J. — Everyone who faces retirement, voluntarily or otherwise holds the hope that the retirement years will be "the golden years" they're supposed to be. Whether retirement is the best time of one's life or the worst depends upon the amount of planning and effort invested in preparation for it. To have a successful retirement means doing the things we'd like to do, going where we'd like to go, and being free to make choices. All of these require that we attain at least a reasonable level of financial independence.

Rutgers Cooperative Extension is offering a retirement series titled "Retirement Planning: Get An Early Start." This five week series will begin on Monday, March 20 and run through April 17, 6:30 - 8:30 p.m. at the Extension Center on Route 31, in Flemington, NJ. To register or receive more information, call Rutgers Cooperative Extension at (908) 788-1342.

Know Farm's 'Microenvironment,' Says Corn Grower President

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MONTOURSVILLE (Lycoming Co.) — You have to know the microenvironment of every place you farm in order to be able to make an intelligent choice in seed corn selection, said Curt Rakestraw, newly elected president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, Inc.

During an interview early last month with Lancaster Farming, Rakestraw toured several of the 31 different farm sites he rents in the farm valley north of Rakestraw farms about 1,100 acres of crops (700 acres in corn, 150 acres in small grain and 150 acres in hay) with his brother Dave. Curt said that a farmer must know the qualities of the soil and the environment as a whole.

We have some clay and rock, he said. They say this is where the glaciers did their most damage. The edge of the glacier was right here. So we get a little bit of everything around here.

Rakestraw said a lot of the land he rents to grow corn has a lot of different varieties of soil, ranging from a Hagerstown silt loam to shaley loam to red

For Snook, Standability's Most Important Factor

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

JERSEY SHORE (Lycoming Co.) — Some people say it's the rich river bottom soils that allow Ed Snook to take home the first place ribbons in the Pennsylvania Corn Club's annual production contest. But according to the long time corn grower and hog farmer, there are many factors that contribute to bumper corn crops.

In the Five Acre Corn Club, I don't enter the same fields every yea. I've had them in the Nippenose Valley on limestone ground and along the river. It's always pushed up to me that I have pig manure and river field, but we've had the Five Year Corn Club in seven or eight locations and we've won awards on all of them, he said.

In this year's contest, Snook placed first in the three year average shelled grain class for the regular harvest size. His yield in 1992 was 191.8 bushels per acre. In 1993 he produced 201.6 bushels per acre and in 1994 he produced 194.1 bushels per acre for an average

Expert Says It's Time To Prune

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Winter and early spring are ideal times for pruning trees to remove dead or damaged wood because the branching patterns are seen more easily than at other times of the year. And storms often cause tree limbs to break, making their removal necessary.

Limbs already down are easy to round up and cart off to the dump. And utility companies will help remove downed limbs, especially in the roads where they can pose a safety threat. But torn limbs still hanging on trees need to be cut correctly to ensure the continued health of the trees.

"Torn limbs should be cut as soon as possible after the damage has occurred to prevent further injury to trees from insects, diseases or the weight of the limbs," said Ray Bosmans, horticulturist at the Home and Garden Information Center of the Cooperative Extension Service—University of Maryland at College Park.

Three cuts need to be made to properly prune limbs with a diameter of two inches or more. The first is an undercut made to prevent the bark from ripping. Then an overcut is executed to remove the limb entirely. This cut is beyond the first cut to remove the weight. A last cut is used to remove the stub. This last cut needs to be close to — but not into — the branch collar, a visible ring of tissue or bark that is close to where the branch attaches to the tree. Cutting close to the collar, but not removing it, provides for quicker healing.

Tools used for pruning need to be sharp. This makes for a smoother cut. Pruning shears and saws work best. Limbs that are up to 3/4 inch thick can be cut with loppers, Bosmans said. Again, be sure not to cut into the trunk. After pruning a branch, a wound will remain and some decay is possible. This is okay; it will heal. If the fallen limb is diseased, disinfect the pruning tools between cuts with bleach to prevent other parts of the tree from becoming infected.

When pruning damaged limbs after a storm, it's a good idea to check other limbs to see if any additional pruning is needed or if any limbs look like they may not make it through the next storm, said Sandy Pierson, an extension master gardener on the Eastern Shore. Branches that rub against each other and cause abrasions and branches with weak crotch angles should be removed to prevent later damage. Also, inspect the trunks for damage.

Old wounds should be left alone. Trees protect themselves by developing callus tissue around the wounds. Scraping away this tissue decreases the trees' defense mechanisms. Wound dressing, shellac, or paint should not be used.

Watch For Tetanus

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — "Mothers warn children about the dangers of stepping on a rusty nail. Adults should recall mother's warning, too. Without the right immunization, people can get a hazardous tetanus infection from such an injury," said Neil Lesitsky, MD, president of the 4,000-member Pennsylvania Academy of Family Physicians (PAFP).

"Tetanus results when bacteria enter a wound or injury. Then the bacteria form a poison which can cause powerful, painful and potentially fatal muscle spasms," said Lesitsky. Tetanus is called "lock jaw" because infected patients often can't use their muscles to open their mouths or to swallow.

"Tetanus and teen-agers comprise the vast majority of tetanus victims because they aren't immunized or don't receive booster shots. Even if you had all of your childhood tetanus vaccinations, you still need to be reimmunized every 10 years to maintain protection," Lesitsky said.

The shot may be covered under your health insurance policy. State law (Act 35 of 1992) requires many insurers to cover tetanus immunizations for children under age 21 and, in some cases, older dependents.

"Talk to your physician about tetanus immunization. If you are ill or had a reaction to a previous immunization, your doctor may not recommend a tetanus shot right now. Report any reaction to the vaccination (beyond the normal redness or soreness at the vaccination site, the thigh) to your doctor, too," said Lesitsky. "Keep a record of your immunization — it's especially important if you are injured in an accident to know when you had your last tetanus shot."

Although there now are less than 50 cases of tetanus reported in the U.S. each year, about half the victims will die from the infection, and they usually are adults. Immunization has virtually wiped out tetanus in children — the childhood immunization schedule calls for four vaccinations between ages two months and 15 months, with a fifth at ages four to six (before entering first grade). Tetanus vaccinations often are given in conjunction with diphtheria and pertussis (whooping cough) vaccines as a DTP, a DTaP or a Td.

Memories In Premier Performance

HERSHEY, (Dauphin Co.) — Storyteller Janice Henry weaves the experiences and memories of women who have worked in the Hershey chocolate factory from as early as 1919 into a thoroughly enjoyable performance which premiers at the Hershey Museum on March 12, 1995 at 2 p.m.

Through the words and stories of workers whom Janice interviewed emerges a wonderfully graphic picture of life in the chocolate factory from the early days of its existence through to the present. The stories are related to the audience through the words of a fictional 14 year-old chocolate worker.

Through her voice, the collective memories of many actual women workers are told. "You don't have to be famous for your life to be history" is the underlying premise of the Hershey Museum's Hershey worker project.

The program is free with museum admission ($4 adults, $1.75 youth ages 3-15, $3.50 senior citizens.) A special half-price discount is being offered to Hershey chocolate factory workers who show their Hershey Employee Picture ID and to Hershey Chocolate factory Retirees who show their Hershey Medical Insurance Cards to Hershey Museum admissions staff. Meat Industry Surpasses Goals In Nutrition Education

CHICAGO, Ill. — Reaching goals early is a satisfying accomplishment, but reaching them five years ahead of time is an exceptional achievement.

That's the exciting result for the National Live Stock and Meat Board, though, which has exceeded its goals for reaching increasing numbers of school children with nutrition education materials by the year 2000. Goals were established in 1992 by the Youth Initiative Task Force, a meat industry coalition comprised of meat producers and education experts.

According to Jim Hauge, Meat Board chairman, evaluation of the Meat Board efforts were gratifying. "We intended to increase our reach to preschoolers and elementary, junior high and high school students by specified amounts by the year 2000," said Hauge, a beef and pork producer from Leith, N.D. "We've already surpassed our year 2000 goals—in some cases by more than 100 percent."

Meat Board education programs cover a wide range of meat-related topics with activities geared for different age groups. Subjects covered include meat's nutritional profile, its role in dietary guidelines of the USDA's Food Guide Pyramid and the ways in which meat producers help protect the environment.

Farm Women Societies

Berks Society 1

The Oley Legion Diner, Oley, served as the meeting place for Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 1 for their February meeting. The group welcomed two guests, Marie Kutz and Arlene Weiss, to their meeting. The business meeting, conducted by President Evelyn Heacock, followed a luncheon there.

To celebrate Valentine's Day, gifts of red were exchanged, and member Ruth Walters displayed a collection of old valentines.

It was with regret that Group 1 noted the loss of one of their members, Grace Schaeffer, who recently passed away while on vacation in Florida.

Catherine Yanos will be hostess for the March meeting at her Douglassville home on March 8, at 7:30 p.m. Bingo games will be the feature of the evening.

Native American Herbs, Lore At Museum Meeting

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — The use of Native American herbs and the ancient lore associated with these herbs will be the topic of the Winters Museum herb garden meeting on Monday, March 6 at 7 p.m. The program will be held at the Winters Heritage House Museum, 43 High ST., Elizabethtown.

Bob and Pam Censier, members of the Museum's Indian cultures committee, are the speakers for the evening. They will discuss Native American herbs and their uses, which were primarily medicinal in nature. Their talk will focus on herbs which grow naturally in the Lancaster County region.

After the lecture, ample time will be allotted for questions and answers. Guests will also be invited to sample Native American fry bread and tea.

The Censiers bring with them a wealth of knowledge about Native Americans as well as a hands-on display of Native American artifacts. Among the items which will be on exhibit during the evening include Indian drums and flute, hides, antler pipe, bead work, and publications and hand-outs about current Indian lifestyle and special events.

Help Disabled Farmers

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — People with disabilities in eight Pennsylvania counties may have better opportunities in agriculture, thanks to a Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry grant to Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"The grant establishes a regional resource center that will help agricultural workers to rejoin the workforce after disabling injuries," said Dr. Connie Baggett, associate professor of agricultural education at Penn State.

The North Central Agribusiness Research Center will serve people with disabilities in Clinton, Lycoming, Montour, Northumberland, Potter, Snyder, Tioga, and Union counties and will be housed in the Agricultural Administration Building on Penn State's University Park Campus.

According to the National Safety Council, approximately 130,000 people suffer disabling injuries on U.S. farms each year, each costing approximately $27,000 in medical expenses, lost wages, and other expenses.

Penn State research indicates that each year approximately 14 percent of the state's farm operations experience an injury serious enough to cause lost work time, and about two percent of these injuries leave the victim with a permanent disability.

"The center will evaluate people with disabilities who are interested in agriculture and recommend ways they can realize their career goals," said Baggett, who has worked with people with special needs since the early 1980s.

Growers Of Perishables Urged To Make 'Fresh Connection'

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Consumption of fresh fruits and vegetables is leveling off. As a result, small-acreage growers—both organic and nonorganic—need to master some basic techniques for insuring high-quality produce that will continue to attract consumers to roadside stands, farmers markets, and other points of sale.

That's the word from Dr. Jarvis L. Cain, fruits and vegetables marketing management specialist for the Cooperative Extension Service, University of Maryland at College Park.

Cain also notes that a major supermarket chain in the Baltimore-Washington, D.C.. corridor is expanding its program of buying fresh fruits and vegetables on a pooled basis from local growers if it can be assured of consistent acceptable quality.

A professor of agricultural and resource economics, Cain is the coordinator for an extension service post-harvest and marketing focus group established a year ago to help small growers survive at a profitable level.

The focus group is composed of extension specialists and agents who work in the realm of commercial horticulture throughout Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia. It recommended a series of three educational sessions over the next 18 months to help both small and large growers become more quality-proficient. The sessions will start at a basic level and become successively more advanced.

The first "Profiting With Perishables" basic session is scheduled March 14 at the Greater Waldorf Jaycees Community Center in Waldorf, Md. (Charles County), from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m.

Speakers from the University of Delaware, Virginia Tech, University of Maryland at College Park, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture are on the agenda. They will present common- sense approaches to post-harvest management and temperature- humidity control. Variety recommendations will be included.

The meeting hall is located along U.S. Highway 301 at Highway 5 in Waldorf. A $10 registration fee includes lunch.

Commodity Leader Testifies On Clean Water Act

WASHINGTON, D.C. — John Long, first vice president of the American Soybean Association, and farmer from Newberry, S.C., testified before the House Transportation Committee on legislation to reauthorize the Clean Water Act.

In addition to ASA, Long represented a coalition of commodity organizations at the hearing, including the National Association of Wheat Growers, the National Corn Growers Association, and the National Cotton Council.

Long testified that, "In watersheds where impairment has been specifically related to agriculture, farmers have been willing participants in cooperative watershed projects."

Long presented two specific examples of successful watershed projects that he had personally been involved with near his farm, both involving the Bush River in South Carolina. The two projects, one to reduce erosion and sedimentation and the other a hydrological program, each involved cooperative efforts that resulted in the voluntary adoption of best management practices to improve water quality with federal, state, and local agencies providing technical information and cost-sharing incentives.

Long explained that, "these projects, and others like them, where farmers are voluntarily adopting best management practices to reduce runoff, are based on the important principles of targeting resources to priority impaired watersheds, working partnerships between private landowners and government agencies, voluntary participation, site-specific planning, and respect for private property rights." ASA and the other groups are working with members of the Committee to make improvements in H.R. 961, legislation introduced to reauthorize the Clean Water Act.

Many of the remedies and practices are costly. Long told the Committee, "I want to emphasize the importance of cost-sharing programs and the continuing need for the development of new technologies and conservation practices that are not so expensive."

Long urged the Committee to focus the CWA amendments "to ensure that states have the needed resources to establish working partnerships with private landowners within impaired watersheds."

Zimmerman Sponsors Domestic Animal Act

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Legislation to combine outdated domestic animal health laws into one statute and provide for closer regulation of animal disease has been sponsored by first-term legislator Rep. Leroy Zimmerman (R-Lancaster).

House Bill 600 would give the Agriculture Department the necessary authority to better control animal disease and take necessary steps to assure that animal and human health occupy a high priority. The bill addresses animals kept in captivity and includes farm animals as well as those kept as pets. Provisions included in a separate "Dog Law" are not affected.

"One of the measure's most important functions is to authorize the Agriculture Department to identify 50 dangerous transmissible diseases and ensure that humans are not harmed by their existence. There have been several outbreaks of animal disease which have endangered both the animal and human population. Many animal diseases are transmissible to humans and there will be less risk if those diseases are properly controlled. With this legislation in place, I feel these cases could be greatly reduced," said Zimmerman.

"Another important provision of the bill would repeal inaccurate legislation," Zimmerman said. "The measure reorganizes several existing laws by repealing 17 statutes and one section of the Administrative Code, although much of their content is included in House Bill 600. For example, the 1929 Diseased Animal Importation Law requires that swine be vaccinated for hog cholera before entering Pennsylvania. However, hog cholera has been eradicated and the vaccine has been banned from the country. The need for updating is evident."

Zimmerman said the bill would also give the Agriculture Department the authority to regulate the identification of animals through the use of tattoos, brands or microchips. It could also quarantine, condemn, euthanize and compensate owners for the destruction of diseased animals.

Zimmerman said the legislation would also:

- Allow the department to regulate dealers and haulers of domestic animals and dead domestic animals and to require the licensure of such persons.
- Authorize the department to establish standards of safe and sanitary disposal of dead domestic animals.
- Authorize the department to regulate the slaughter/processing, euthanasia, or destruction of domestic animals for disease control.
- Require operators of garbage feeding businesses to be licensed by the department.

Zimmerman said that some laws are over 100 years old and others are vague requiring updating to reflect modern times. He emphasized that protecting animal health will ensure the protection of human health as well as the viability of the commonwealth's animal industry.

Limousin Alliance On Cutting Edge

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Spend all of the time you want cussing and discussing the opportunities and challenges involved with value-based marketing — some folks in the industry have made a commitment to changing ideals into reality.

For instance, according to the Beef Quality Audit, the beef industry loses some $279.82 per head of fed cattle each year due to quality losses — everything from excess fat to inadequate muscle. How do cattlemen recover at least some of that lost opportunity?

Likewise, how do cattlemen receive full value for the true merit of their cattle?

Integrated Beef Technologies (IBT) in Denver has a program that should answer both questions, at least in part. Last fall, IBT began several alliance programs aimed at managing cattle individually with predetermined value endpoints in mind, selling those cattle to a packer for a negotiated price with discounts and premiums based on true value, then documenting the feedlot and carcass data for all parties involved — the commercial cattlemen, the feeder, the packer and the seedstock producer who supplied bulls to the commercial cattleman.

One of the IBT programs is the the Limousin Alliance. With enrollment still open, there are 2,500 head of Limousin and Limousin crossbred steers and heifers on feed at Decatur County Feed Yard in Oberlin, Kan. Going on feed, the cattle received an electronic ear tag.

PSEUDORABIES: "KEEPING OFF MY FARM"

Timothy P. Trayer, DVM
Veterinary Practitioner
Denver, Pa.

The primary method of spread of pseudorabies is still pig-to-pig.

The key to control exposure of your farm to pseudorabies (PR) is to maintain a well thought-out plan of animal movement on and off your farm. The infected pig is still the largest single source of pseudorabies virus (PRV).

When new herd replacements come to the farm, they should be placed in an isolation facility that houses these animals away from the main herd. They should remain there for 45 days minimum. During isolation, these animals should be tested for health concerns and vaccinated.

No matter how good the boar next door, don't bring him to your farm to service your sows. He could be a source of PRV or PRRS.

Control movement of pigs within and off your farm can be just as critical as control of new pigs coming to your farm. Dedicate one truck to the movement of animals within your farm.

Never use the same truck to haul market or cull animals and nursery or grower pigs between facilities on the farm. Trucks and trailers that are used to haul pigs off the farm should be cleaned and disinfected before coming back to the farm. Never allow a partial load of pigs from another farm to come to your farm unless you would like new health concerns.

Try not to borrow from or loan equipment to another farm. If this becomes necessary, clean and disinfect the equipment and let it stand for three days.

Swine should not have access for two days to pastures which were recently spread with manure.

It has been documented that PRV can be transported through the air five miles downwind of a PRV outbreak. Certain geographical and climatic conditions must be considered as well as the swine density in the area. Swine populations that are not vaccinated have a low resistance to PRV.

Producers need to be aware of the PRV status in their area. Be cooperative with the surveillance program being conducted by the state and U.S. Department of Agriculture. Vaccinate for PRV if other PRV farms are within two miles of your farm with PR-Vac Plus™.

Strengthen your on-farm biosecurity and continue your off-farm biosecurity. Knowing the neighborhood disease status will help in making testing and vaccination decisions.

Unless delivery trucks have direct contact with swine or their manure, the chance for PRV transmission is very low. Precautions still should be taken. Check for manure contamination of delivered grain. Organic material, such as hog manure or feed, can harbor PRV for four days. Therefore, purchased grain should be stored for a minimum of four days before it is fed to pigs.

Do not use the same truck to haul livestock and feed. In central Pennsylvania, producers rarely use the same vehicle to haul pigs and feed. Any grain imported from the Midwest has a storage and transit time which usually exceeds four days.

People should be considered a source of disease spread. Manure can be carried between groups of pigs on shoes and clothing. Don't let people wander through your facilities. When people come to your farm, insist that they wear clean clothing or coveralls. Disinfected rubber boots or disposable boots can be purchased at farm supply stores and kept on hand.

The key to keeping PRV from spreading to your farm is to manage the whole system. Key areas to control are the swine, their manure, and manure from other sources, the source of your feed, and people who visit your farm. Vaccinating with PR-Vac Plus™ has been very effective in preventing herd infection when a neighbor is positive within 300 yards!

LIGHTING PROGRAMS: MANAGEMENT AND BENEFITS

Dr. William D. Weaver, Jr.
Professor And Head
Dept. Of
Poultry Science

Light, both natural and artificial, in the proper amounts is needed for the efficient production of broilers. Further, in combination with feed, water, ambient temperature and air quality, light is considered to be one of the five critical needs for the health and growth of all animals.

When reviewing the scientific and applied literature along with becoming familiar with the practices used by poultry companies and producers, it is apparent that a number of lighting regimens and schemes are being and have been effectively used in broiler production.

Lighting schedules that change the intensity, the duration (on-off schedules), and wavelengths (color) have been or are being used to alter bird behavior and performance.

The purpose of this article is to explore the practical benefits that can be derived from various lighting regimens and the management of these regimens.

Various Lighting Programs

Intermittent Regimens. Various intermittent lighting programs have been used to stimulate growth and improve feed conversion, slow down early growth, reduce mortality, and decrease leg problems of broilers.

Studies reported by Cherry et al. and Weaver et al. showed that broilers provided with a regimen consisting of 1 hour light and 2 or 3 hours of darkness over a 24-hour period had heavier body weights and/or lower feed conversions than birds on continuous low intensity, or intensities that varied to simulate day and night conditions. Further, Weaver et al. demonstrated that feeder space was more critical for broilers on intermittent than on continuous light, as they found that performance was actually worse under intermittent patterns when one versus two feeder pans were provided for each 75 birds.

Although most producers do not have light-controlled houses and cannot use intermittent lighting regimens on a 24-hour basis, many do use intermittent lighting during the dark periods. Programs such as 1 hour on, 2 or 3 hours off and 2 hours on, 2 hours off are used to stimulate feed consumption and create additional activity during these periods. These programs have been shown to increase body weight and reduce leg abnormalities and electrical consumption.

However, as with any intermittent lighting program, adequate feeder space is critical. Therefore, if there are more than 75 birds per pan, the lighting schedules may need to be adjusted to obtain maximum benefits.

Various intermittent lighting patterns have also been shown to reduce mortality and increase leg strength. Classen and Riddell reported that broilers under intermittent regimens when compared with continuous light, or 23-hour light and 1 hour darkness, had similar body weights but reduced incidences of sudden death syndrome, total mortality, and leg disorders. Wilson et al., when using similar lighting regimens, reported a reduction in the incidence and severity of leg abnormalities with broilers on an intermittent program. Further, Newberry et al. reported a reduction in leg disorders and mortality with similar body weights and feed conversions under continuous light intensities at 18 versus 6 foot candles.

Light Vs. Dark. The availability of light has also been shown to increase the rate of passage of feed through the GI tract of broilers. May et al. reported that broilers given light after feed was withdrawn, passed feed more rapidly through the crop and gizzard than birds in darkness.

Artificial Light Sources. Scheideler, when reporting results from a field trial, demonstrated similar body weights and feeding conversions and reduced electrical usage when broilers were lighted with fluorescent vs. incandescent fixtures. In a study where incandescent, fluorescent, and high pressure sodium vapor fixtures were compared, Zimmerman reported similar production performance but reduced electrical usage with the latter two light sources.

Managing Lighting Programs

Early research with lighting programs showed that continuous low intensities were most beneficial for broiler performance. However, more recently intermittent regimens, especially those patterns that slow early growth, and increased intensities have been shown to provide beneficial effects on performance.

In a recent rather extensive field study conducted by the author, it was found that light intensity and standard deviation for light intensity (variation of light intensity in the building) were statistically correlated with a number of traits associated with production performance and processing efficiency. Results from the trial generally showed that increases in intensity and reductions in the variability in intensity increased body weight and percentage Grade A, and reduced feed conversion and condemnations. Another field study, also conducted by the author, further showed that percentage Grade A was positively correlated with increases in light intensity.

Summary

Resulting primarily through genetics, broilers today are much less active than in the past. Therefore, past programs using low light intensity to reduce the activity of the birds have given way to programs designed to increase activity.

Increased light intensity early in the cycle has also become more important with the introduction and use of nipple drinkers.

With the advent of some of the physiological disorders, such as sudden death syndrome and ascites, which are associated with rapid growth, various intermittent and reduced lighting regimens have been used to slow early muscle growth and stimulate more rapid growth of support organs. (When given the choice between supporting the development of muscle and support organs such as the heart and lungs, the bird, or any animal for that matter, will select the latter.)

Finally, when installing and operating a lighting system for broilers, one should consider higher light intensities, providing an average of 4 to 6 foot candles at bird level. With higher intensities it normally becomes economical to install fluorescent, or possibly in some instances, high pressure sodium vapor or mercury vapor fixtures to replace incandescent lights.

Uniformity is also important. Therefore, in many instances, it will be necessary to install more fixtures of a lower wattage, in contrast to a few large fixtures, to accomplish proper distribution of light.

Remember, light fixtures must burn and be clean to produce proper light intensity. Therefore, have a program to replace burned-out lamps and clean lamps between cycles.

PLANNING FOR 1995 FEED STORAGE... WILTED HAY...SILAGE...HI-MOISTURE GRAINS

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

"The major costs on dairy and livestock farms are related to FEED: production - harvesting - storage - purchases - delivery to animals."

Significant savings in time and money are possible when you store and deliver your forage from a poured concrete silo, equipped with a Big Jim Distributor/ Unloader.

Protect your valuable forages from rain, sleet, snow, mud, ice and wind. Reduce the stress! Increase the efficiency of your feeds, labor, and livestock.

At SOLLENBERGER SILOS CORP. we know a lot about feed storage and handling... we've been in the business since 1908. If you are thinking about new or additional feed storage, give us a call. We'd like to contribute to your success.

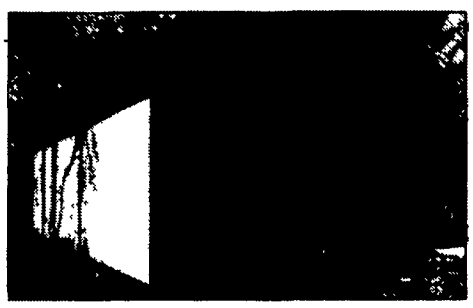
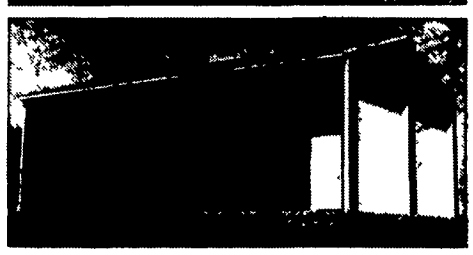
Side with Alumax ALU-TUFF Steel





When you put up a building, you expect it to be attractive and to last. A building constructed with ALU-TUFF will meet those expectations. That's because ALU-TUFF is made using top-quality materials, super-tough protective coatings, and a unique rib design that's both functional and attractive.

Years from now when other buildings are starting to show their age, your building will still look good.

- A STRONG PROFILE High 3/4-inch ribs on nine-inch centers give ALU-TUFF exceptionally high spanning properties for its weight and thickness, while stiffening ribs in flat areas prevent rippling.
- MADE TO LAST To keep Alu-Tuff working hard and looking good for years to come, we protect it with an oven-cured system of four different coatings.
- A GREAT LOOKING PANEL You don't have to sacrifice good looks to get a tough steel panel.
- MORE QUALITY FEATURES Each ALU-TUFF sheet is 38 inches wide to provide 36-inch coverage. That's wide enough to minimize the number of side laps, yet narrow enough to be easy to handle.

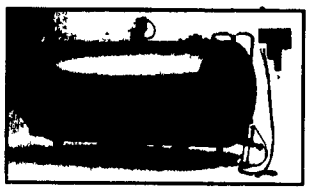
MUELLER DAIRY FARM EQUIPMENT

Offer

Scroll-Compressor Technology

New in 1994



You may pay less for some dairy farm equipment... but it can cost you more!

Equipment cost is not the only cost of cooling milk

In the long run, total operating costs of a Mueller milk-cooling system are generally substantially less than those of "bargain-brand" milk-cooling equipment.

Example	Mueller	Competition
Cost of equipment	$31 000	$28 000
Cost of electricity @ 08 kW for 12 000 lbs milk/day for 10 years	$17 550	$22 850
Total operating cost for ten years	$48 550	$50 850
Savings	$ 2 300

WHERE VALUE-BASED MARKETING BEGINS

Maryland Simmental Sale

Call For Catalog

In the cattle business, Value-Based Marketing begins at conception. To maximize return on investment you must select cattle that are reproductively sound, fast-growing efficient in the feedlot, and hang a high cutability, adequately marbled carcass. That's why more cattlemen are turning to Simmental. Simmental cows excel in reproductive efficiency, and the growth of Simmental-influenced calves speaks for itself.

Think about Value-Based Marketing, then use Simmental.

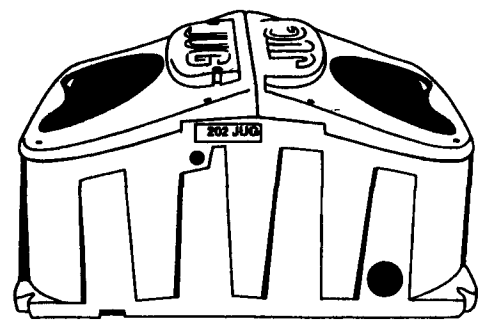
The JUG passes the "winter of '93-'94" test



Remember the c-c-c-c-c-cold winter of '93-'94? Wondering what the next one will bring and how your herd will fair?

Install the energy-efficient JUG to reduce concerns about freezing cattle fountains. Even in the coldest weather, the JUG performed, while the competition's waterers did not.

While the JUG's thick urethane insulation keeps the winter cold out, its patented drawtube recirculates water. Cooler bowl water exchanges with warmer reservoir water to keep bowl water open. The JUG will do its job.

A cold weather test conducted by an Iowa college during the winter of '94 demonstrated its energy efficiency. The JUG used only 108 kilowatts of electricity over four months for a cost of $8.64. A competitor's waterer used 816 kilowatts, costing $65.28, almost eight times as much. The test confirmed the JUG's energy efficiency.

No other waterer equals the Jug for clean, palatable water. Low maintenance, the JUG also meets the requirements for dairy approval.

AT NOON
AT PENN STATE'S AG ARENA
Only the top bulls from the respective herds were put on test. They are fully evaluated for ADG on test, lifetime WDA, adjusted 205- and 365-day weights. The bulls are ultrasonically scanned for backfat thickness and loin-eye area and are given a complete breeding soundness and semen exam. The bulls will have health papers to go anywhere. After the evaluation, the top two-thirds of the bulls will be offered. In the past, these bulls have been real herd-improving bargains. Current EPD's will be available.

PPI Announces Director

NORCROSS, Ga. — Dr. Thomas W. Bruulsema is joining the staff of the Potash & Phosphate Institute (PPI) as Eastern Canada and Northeast U.S. director. He is responsible for the agronomic research and education programs of the Institute in the region.

"We are proud to welcome Tom Bruulsema to the organization," said Dr. David W. Dibb, president of PPI. "He has excellent credentials as an agronomic scientist and proven skills in working with people."

A native of Ontario, Bruulsema was active in the operation and management of his home farm for several years during high school. In 1983, he graduated with distinction from the University of Guelph with a bachelor's degree in agriculture, then completed his master's degree in crop science in 1985.

From 1986 to 1990, Bruulsema and his wife, Elizabeth Anne, worked as volunteers in Bangladesh, he as a research agronomist, she as a family nutrition adviser.

After returning to North America, Bruulsema studied and conducted research from 1991 to early 1994 at Cornell University. Following completion of requirements for his doctorate, he moved to the University of Minnesota. As a research associate studying fertility management of soil spatial variability, he worked with Dr. Gary Malzer.

In his new responsibility, Bruulsema will direct PPI programs in the Canadian provinces of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and Newfoundland. His region will also include Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, and the New England states.

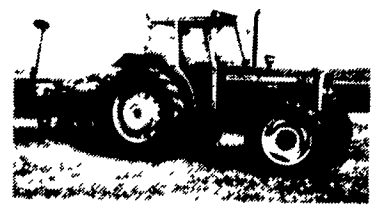
New Transmission For Massey Ferguson Tractors

ATLANTA, Ga. — Massey Ferguson® 300 Series cab and footstep tractors, in 60, 70, 80 and 95 PTO horsepower models, are available with a new 18 Speedshift transmission that excels in row crop and field work.

"The 18 Speedshift transmission provides a total of 18 forward and six reverse speeds, with eight speed ratios in the 3.5 to 8.5 mph working range plus excellent gear overlap. This increases productivity for jobs such as primary and secondary tillage, cultivating, planting, chemical application, harvesting, mowing, and baling," said Wilfred Boyle, director, Massey Ferguson operations.



Massey Ferguson 300 Series cab and footstep tractors, in 60, 70, 80 and 95 PTO horsepower models, are available with a new 18 Speedshift transmission that excels in row crop and field work.

The MF® 18 Speedshift transmission utilizes one reverse and three forward synchronized gears, three synchronized ranges, and a two-speed powershift to achieve 18 forward and six reverse speeds. On-the-go speed changes are made without clutching, and all shifts are fully synchronized for maximum comfort, convenience, and productivity.

A synchronized reverse gear is located opposite the first forward gear to provide for easy straight-line shuttle shifts. This improves forward-reverse cycle times for applications such as loader work, moving round bales, tight headland maneuvering, and utility work.

New Figures Show Importance Of Poultry Industry

GEORGETOWN, Del. — Newly released information compiled by Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), the nonprofit trade association working for the continued progress of the Delmarva Peninsula's poultry industry, shows the chicken industry continues to grow, providing major employment opportunities and increased economic contributions to the area.

Broiler production last year totaled 604,523,000 birds, up 5.4 percent from 1993, while the number of pounds produced rose 7.7 percent to reach 2,995,394,000 pounds. Each bird weighed an average of 4.95 pounds, which is heavier than the national average.

Unlike some industries on Delmarva, the poultry industry remained strong in 1994. More than 21,000 were directly employed in the industry, while thousands of others on Delmarva had jobs because of the poultry industry's presence.

These 21,000 earned more than $389 million, a tremendous amount of money in a small area such as Delmarva.

Last year, there were 2,800 growers and 6,000 chicken houses on the peninsula. Growers and poultry companies spent $72 million on capital improvements in 1994, providing another significant economic and employment contribution.

The poultry industry creates a built-in market for local grain and soybean farmers. Most of the corn, soybeans, and sorghum raised by local farmers is used by the poultry industry. In fact, it is necessary to bring in grain from other areas to meet the poultry industry's growing needs. DPI's 1994 figures show that 24 million bushels of soybeans, 70 million bushels of corn, and 997,000 bushels of sorghum, with a farm value of $344,673,000 were used for poultry feed.

Processed and ready for market, the 604,523,000 broiler chickens were valued at $1.413 billion.

"The economy of every community and business on Delmarva is positively impacted by the poultry industry as these figures clearly illustrate," said DPI President Dr. Douglas K. Marvil. "Our industry continues to expand, which benefits everyone on Delmarva. The work done by DPI helps that growth."

United Soybean Board Realigns Program

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — At its annual meeting in St. Louis, the farmer members of the United Soybean Board (USB) realigned the program and operating committee structure.

The new structure now allows each of the program committees to deal directly with all issues affecting their areas. According to Barry Mumby, who was reelected USB chairman at the meeting, the realignment will make the USB committee structure even more goal oriented.

"The USB mission has always been foremost in our minds as we utilize checkoff dollars," Mumby said. "This new structure streamlines our operations while allowing each of the program areas — international marketing, domestic marketing, new uses, production — to control essential elements that affect reaching their particular goals."

He said the new structure creates more flexibility and gains involvement from a broader range of farmers on issues critical to the success of checkoff programs.

In addition to the realignment of the program committees, the strategic planning function was assumed by the Executive Committee. The Audit and Evaluation, Budget and Finance, and Compliance and Credentials committees continue to be comprised of board members who also serve on program committees.

"This modification of the committee structure will help the board to do a better job of investing farmer checkoff dollars," said Mumby. "We live in a time of change, and that is especially true for soybean farmers. And, while we have a good plan, it's not carved in stone. We'll make changes wherever they are necessary to do a better job."

Ag Communication Veteran Named To Meat Board

CHICAGO, Ill.—Sharlet Brown has been promoted to director of research/meat science information for the National Live Stock and Meat Board. Brown started her career in agricultural journalism while still in school and joined the Meat Board in 1988.

Brown will be in charge of all Meat Board research and meat science information disseminated to producers, packers, processors, other industry, segments, academia and scientific audiences. In addition, she will spearhead industry information efforts for Meat Board lamb program.

She will also continue to be director of pork information, which involves overseeing the pork consumer information, youth education, industry communications, and state relations programs.

A South Dakota native, she grew up on one of the nation's leading sheep ranches.

Future Ag Will Be Integrated Into Global Food System

HONOLULU, Hawaii — "No agricultural cooperative meeting here today will be unaffected by the inevitable emergence of a 21st century agriculture. Most will be completely transformed," said C.T. "Terry" Fredrickson, chairman of the board of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, at the 66th NCFC annual meeting.

Fredrickson said this new agriculture will be shaped as never before by the forces of biological and information technology, market coordination and integration, innovation, and entrepreneurship. "It will no longer be a domestic industry to which exports are important, but a fully integrated part of a global food system," he said. "The relationship between the agriculture of the next century and government will be dramatically changed from what we have come to know."

The NCFC chairman, who is also chief executive officer of AgriBank, FCB in St. Paul, Minn., said, "In a curious, ironic way, we will return to the very dawn of modern national agricultural policy in this country."

He drew a parallel stating that cooperatives were the first significant policy solution put forward by agriculture, and the first to be embraced by policymakers. "The challenges confronting agricultural producers competing in a world food system will at least be equally daunting, but cooperatives will have an opportunity to play a larger and more important role than ever before," he said. "That role will be limited only by the bounds of our imagination and our ability to maintain a favorable public policy environment for cooperatives."

To address these new challenges, the co-op leader announced that NCFC and its member cooperatives would be forming response teams composed of farmer directors capable of communicating directly with members of Congress on important issues. "More than ever, the political system will be listening to its constituents. Those who are organized will get their message heard. Those who aren't, won't," he said.

CASE

Precision Tillage
Comes From Binkley & Hurst

Case International 4800 field cultivators tillage precision remains its level best.

First, there's simple fore-and-aft leveling to match tractor to cultivator. A unique self-leveling hitch keeps the unit level regardless of the working depth. Positive, mechanically-maintained depth control also means uniform working depth from side-to-side...all day long.

Moving the 4800 from field to field is easy, too. Hydraulically controlled wings fold past center for extra stability and security during transport.

Put Case IH precision to work in your fields.

Make Your Purchase Now. We Have One Only At Old Price Savings. Model 4800 in 22.9' With 3 Bar Mulcher Tine Attachment and Ascilating Tandem Transport Wheels.

ECOLOTIL TILLAGE SYSTEMS Solve Your Problems!!!

DMI's Patented Point Makes The Difference

ECOLOTIL SYSTEMS

DMI SYSTEM	Min. HP Required
3 Shank Ecolotil	80
5 Shank Ecolotil	130
527 Ecolotiger	130
530 Ecolotiger	170
730 Ecolotiger	250

Each of these machines can be equipped to meet your particular needs. Your choices include shank style, shank arrangement, coulters/ discs, rear levelers or point style.

Soil Compaction is a problem on every farm we've checked. Breaking up the compaction layer

1) decreases soil run-off in wet years, by permitting water to percolate into the subsoil

2) makes room for plant roots systems to seek and find moisture in dry years

#1 CONSERVATION DISC In The EAST

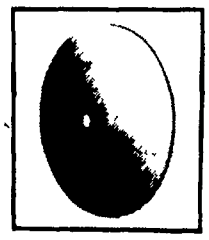
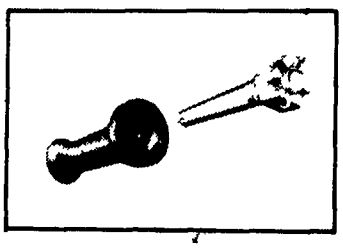
HEAVY-DUTY GANGS

Krause Invented The ROCK-FLEX BEARING SYSTEM.

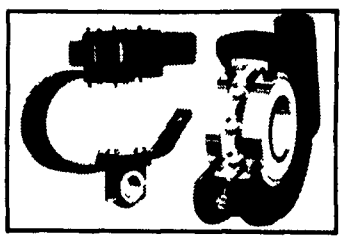
THE HEART OF THE GANG...



IMPACT RESISTANT DISC BLADES With 2.5" Concavity For CONSERVATION Residue Management



COLD-ROLLED Alloy Tie Rods With Nuts On Both Ends. DUCTILE IRON SPOOLS w/Machined Ends For Tight Fit

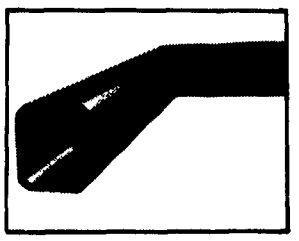


Regreasable BEARINGS Encased In RUBBER Inside A CAST-IRON Housing To Reduce Shock To The Bearings (2 YEAR BEARING WARRANTY)

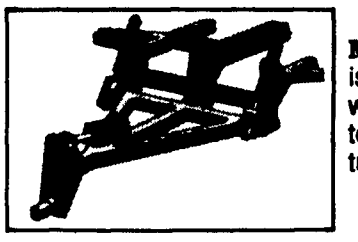
HEAVY-DUTY FRAME

Krause Invented The FLEX-WING System That LEVELS YOUR FIELDS...

Big 1¼ "x15" wing hinge bolts in replaceable, hardened wear bushings. Grease zerk provided for lubrication.
(4990 Series)



Super-strength frame with gang beams bolted to the underside of the frame for extra durability compared to integrated construction techniques where gangs are welded onto the frames.



Massive hitch is built for rugged field use, with a large 4"x4" steel center tube, and 2"x4" steel tube braces.

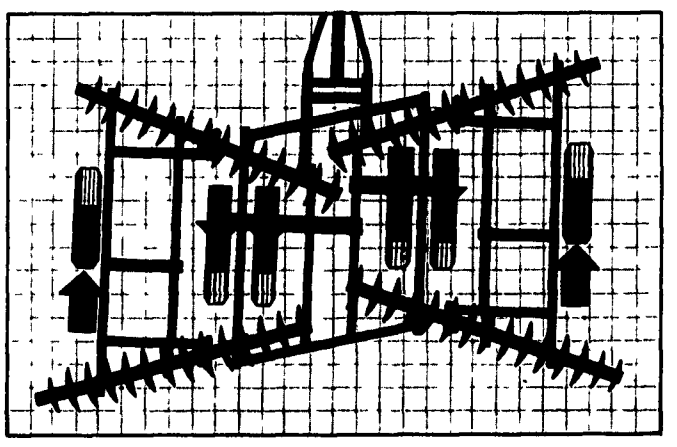
UNIQUE WHEEL ARRANGEMENTS

(4900 Series)



This special wheel arrangement saves fuel by helping to prevent gouging.

In field position, the center wheels move backward as the wing wheels move forward — providing more uniform depth-gauging of front wing gangs. Heavy-duty, regreasable wheel hubs and big 10:00x15" 8-ply tires are standard equipment.

PERFORMANCE IN THE FIELD — Cutting, Finishing, Or Residue Management: KRAUSE DISCS CUT IT!

NEW HOLLAND SPREADERS 12-YEAR PROTECTION PLAN

Most guarantees last only as long as the original owner. But New Holland Bonded Protection means our entire line of box spreaders is guaranteed not just to the first owner, but to all future owners.

Bonded Protection covers every box spreader's floor and sides for twelve years. If a floorboard fails for any reason during normal use, or the sides rust through, we'll replace them free.

Choose from seven models, with 161- to 440-cubic-foot (heaped, double-beater) capacities.

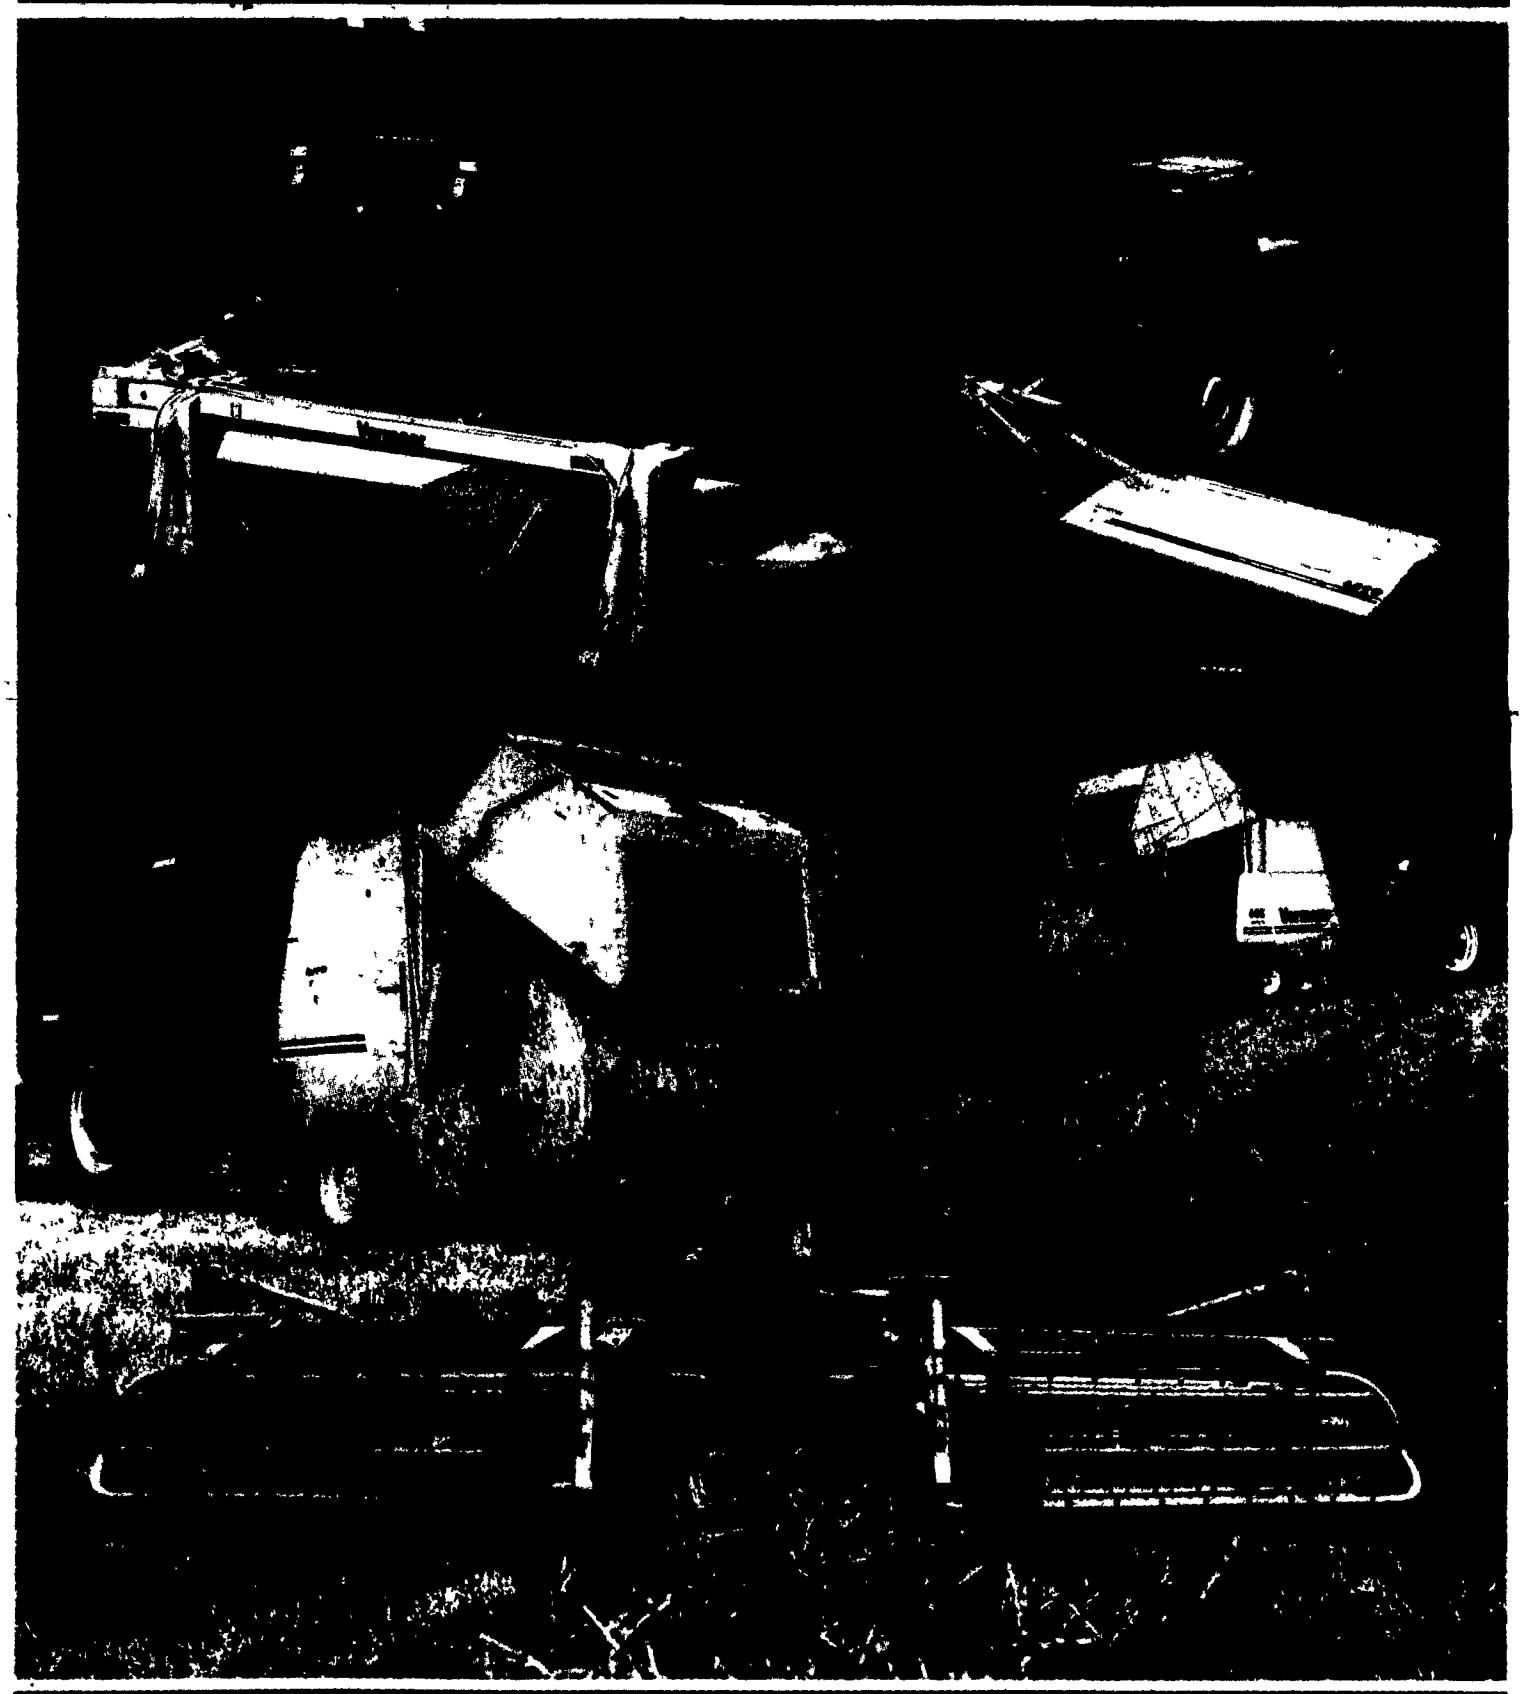
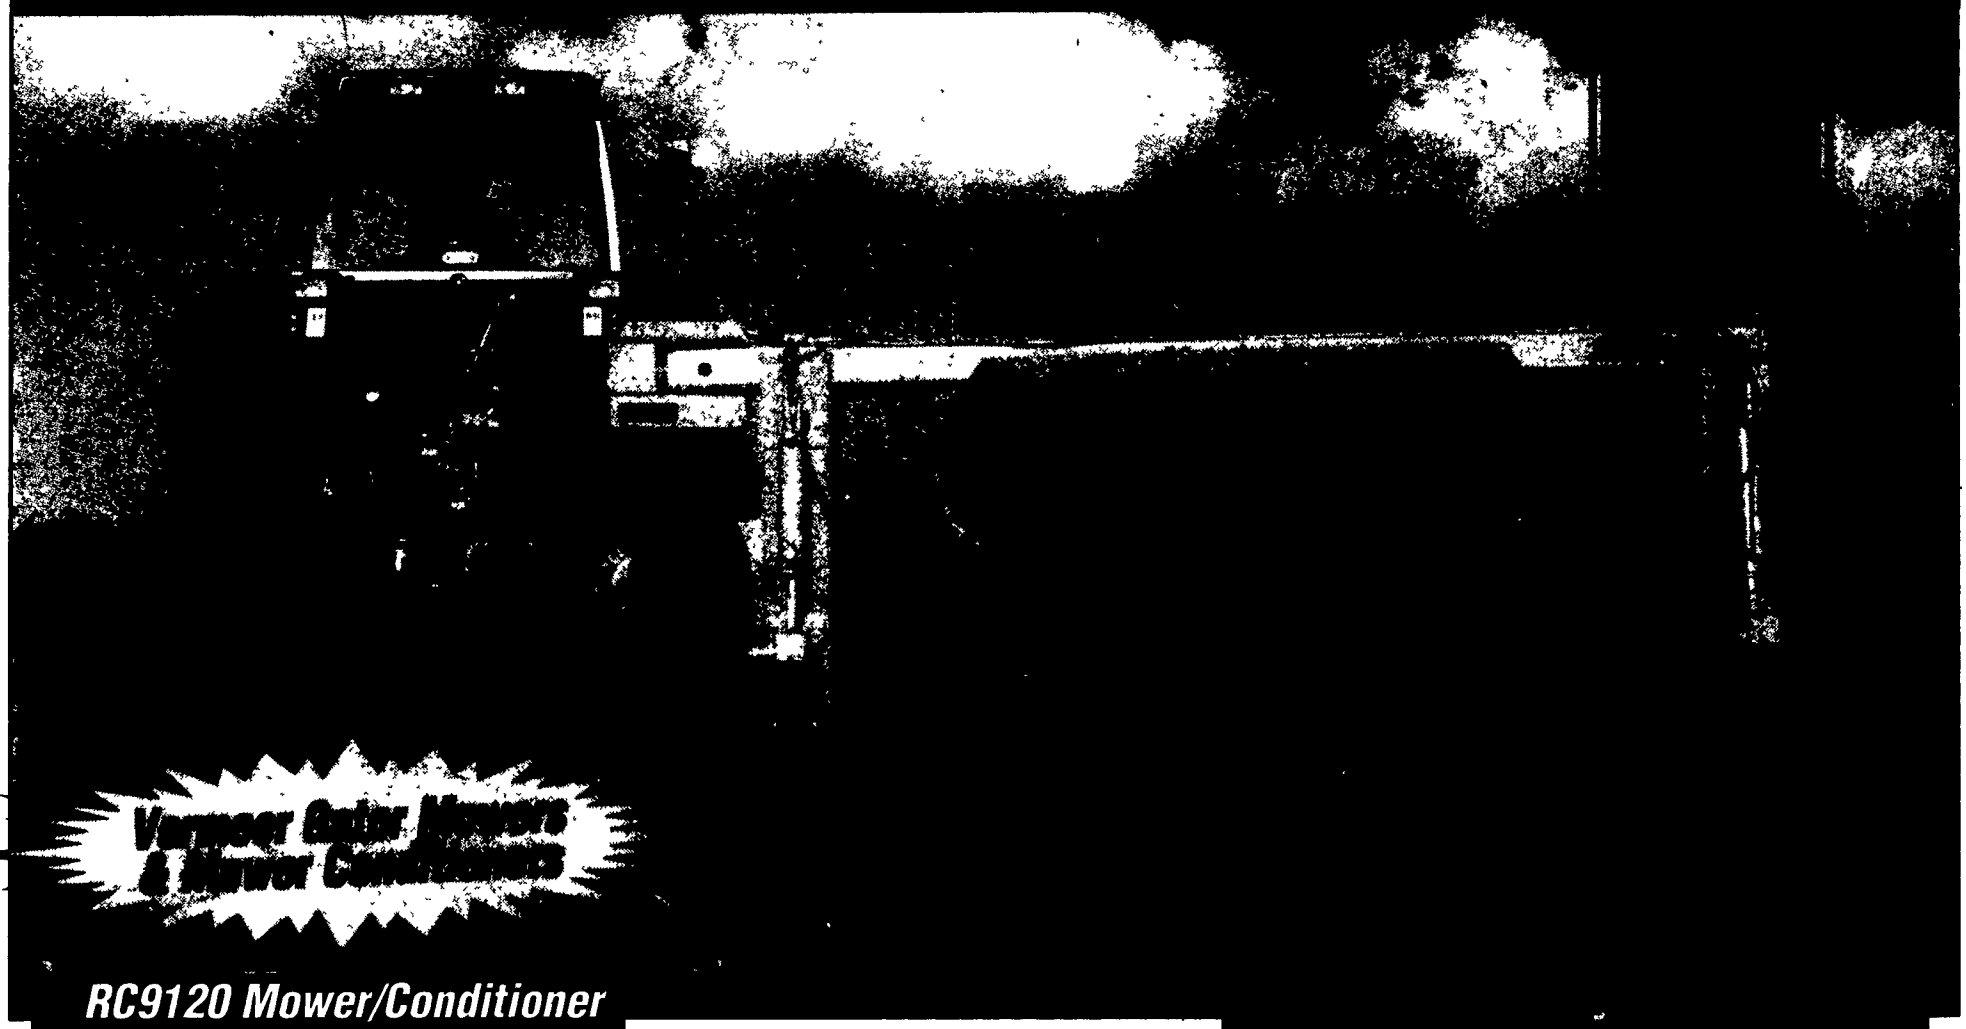
PRODUCT GUIDE



New, Growing Generation Of Mowers & Mower Conditioners!
New! High Production, Hydraulic Rakes For All Budgets!
The Right Way To Make The Round Bale.
Bale Wet Or Dry With The Same Baler!

New! Powerful! Disc-Style! Now In 3 Sizes!



RC9120 Mower/Conditioner

An entire range of cutting positions! Outstanding maneuverability! Operating speeds up to 9 mph!

- HI-PERFORMANCE, LOW-PROFILE, DISC-STYLE BED
  Independent cutting head, with hex shaft drive.
- MODULAR-STYLE CUTTERBARS
  Synchronized cutting discs counter-rotate, producing a cleaner, smoother cut. Means less wrapping, less jamming, lower hp requirements.
- MORE POSITIVE & RELIABLE DRIVE SYSTEM
  Cutting bed and both conditioning rollers are all powered by a single direct-drive gearbox. (Compare it to systems that use the cheaper belt drives. You'll see a big difference, especially in wetter, heavier crops.)
- HEAVY-DUTY TUBULAR FRAME AND STEEL PANEL CONSTRUCTION
  Compare!! It's one of the strongest, heaviest-built units in the field today.
- 3-PT. SUSPENSION! SPRING-LOADED HEADER!
  Outstanding flotation (vertically and laterally)! Cut closer, more uniformly, more consistently without scalping surfaces or missing low spots.
- SINGLE-ACTING LIFT CYLINDERS
  Transport locks secure unit in transport.
- OVERRUNNING SLIP CLUTCH
  Protects tractor and mower/conditioner.
- REINFORCED FOLD-UP HOOD; GAS-ASSIST LIFT CYLINDERS#
  Easy access to the cutter bar. Hinged end hood assembly can also be raised for servicing.
- 2-STAGE HOOD/CURTAIN HEIGHT ADJUSTMENT for different cutting heights/conditions.
- 0-6° BLADE ANGLE ADJUSTMENT

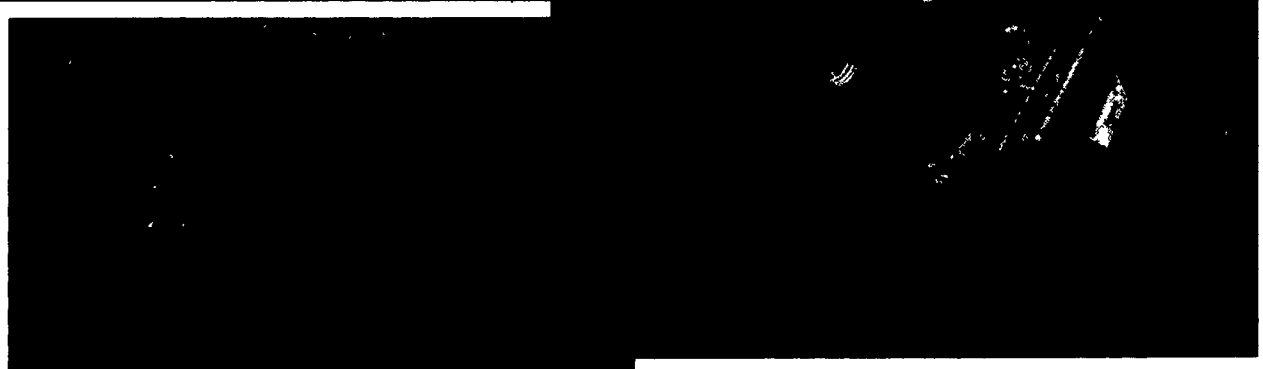
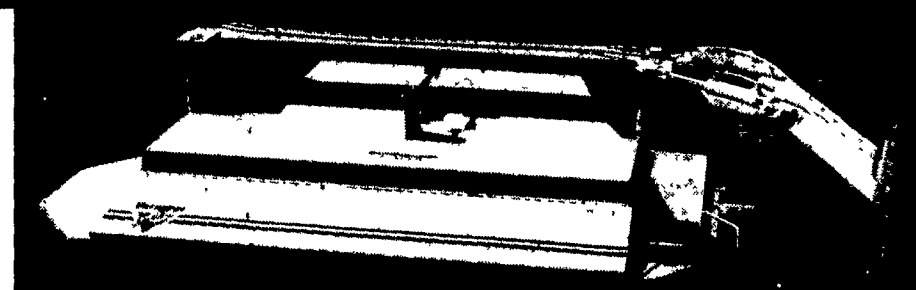
 # Available on RC9120 only



RC5120 Mower/Conditioner

MOW & CONDITION MUCH EARLIER!

DRYDOWN FASTER!



RC7120 Mower/Conditioner

LONG-WEAR INTERMESHING ROLLERS ... gently condition alfalfa, clover and other legume varieties.
They're also designed to better absorb the abuse of rocks and foreign objects which tend to "gouge" or "pock" harder, molded-style conditioner rollers.

Simple screw adjustments fine-tune spacing and crimping pressure. Even if the crop plugs, you can activate the hydraulic roll separator and "power out" plugged material.

OUTSTANDING PROTECTION!#
Compare! Heavy-duty, 1/8"-thick rubber curtain. 250% thicker than cheaper canvas and vinyl curtains!

Vermeer cutting knives* go through an exclusive "austemper" heat-treating process for greater shatter-resistance. They're also reversible & replaceable in seconds.*

SMOOTH, TAPERED CUTTING DISCS
Gently "lift" fresh cuttings toward the conditioning rollers. Top-hat discs, positioned at each end, prevent buildup in corners and promote better crop flow.

So Simple! So Dependable! So Easy To Service & Maintain!

* Vermeer knives and curtains are tested to SAE Recommended Practice, Practice J232 (Industrial Rotary Mowers) and ASAE S474 (Agricultural Mower Safety)

Superior Cutter Bar Design!

Counter-rotating, synchronized cutting discs! Powered by a continuous through-driveshaft, rather than a series of gears. Self-contained! Prepacked with its own set of gears, bearings and lubricant!

This efficient modular design makes it easy to service. Remove the end panel and one hex nut, and you can slide individual discs and spacers off for repair or replacement. It also extends the life of the cutting head, especially in hilly conditions. (Many competitive cutting heads are actually large, flat gearboxes. When operating on side slopes, lubricants drain to the lower end, leaving the drive gears at the elevated end starved for oil.)

Also Available! Dependable, 3-Pt Mtd. Vermeer Gator Mowers

- HYDRAULIC LIFT CONTROL gives you dual positioning for quick-handling on turns or transporting.
- OPTIONAL OFFSET FRAME (5020 only) lets you operate along roadsides.
- OVERHEAD BAR/END PANEL CONSTRUCTION ... adds strength/rigidity to cutting bar assembly. Solid end panel design gets you closer to the fencerows.
- SUPERIOR OPERATOR PROTECTION! Solid 1/8"-thick rubber curtain material, torture-tested in conditions that virtually shredded cheaper canvas and vinyl materials.*
- WEAR SHOES PROTECT DISCS & UNDERSIDE And, optional topping shoes add cutting height.
- SPECIAL "AUSTEMPER" HEAT-TREATED KNIVES* Better shatter-resistance; reversible & replaceable in seconds.
- EASY TO SERVICE! Hydraulic-pivoting hood gives operator complete access to the cutting bed. Pull two pins and you're ready! Cutting discs can be replaced in seconds ... simply by removing the top hex nut.

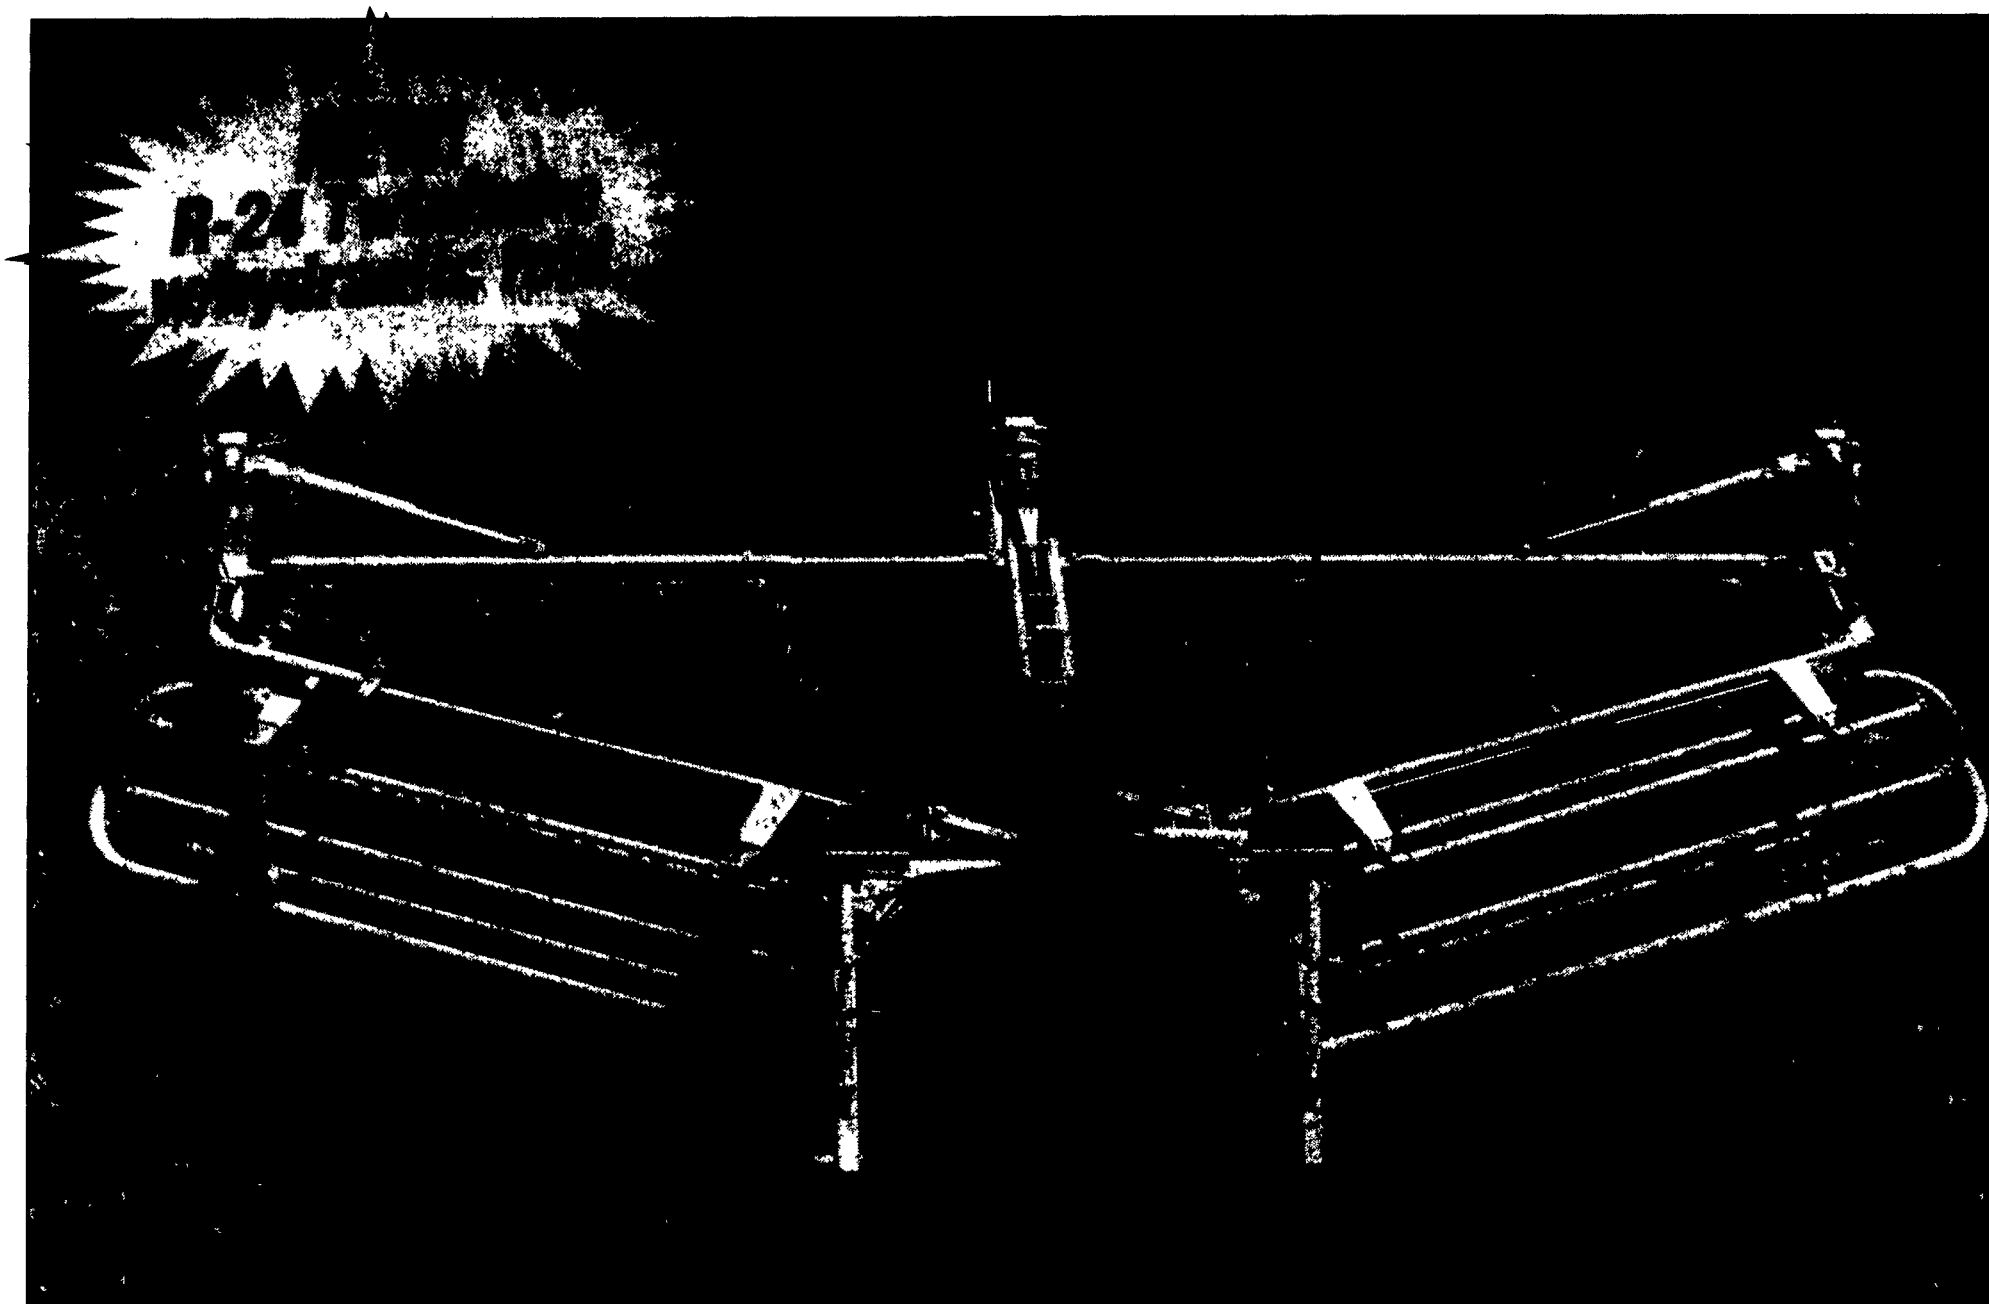
Same dependable cutter bar design as the Vermeer Mower/Conditioners! With infinitely variable cutting heights!



R-24 TwinRake

Great Hay Bales Start With Great Windrows!

Vermeer R-23 & R-24 TwinRakes: The two hottest hay-raking tools in the field today!

- FIT VIRTUALLY ANY HAY HARVESTING SYSTEM
- ADJUSTABLE WINDROW WIDTHS (3' TO 6'), DESIGNED TO MATCH YOUR BALER PICKUP
- ADJUSTABLE RAKING WIDTHS
  Sweep 18-24 feet across (R-24) and cut field time by as much as 66% over single rake systems!
- FINE-TUNED RAKING SPEEDS FOR DIFFERENT CROPS AND FIELD CONDITIONS
- MORE POSITIVE RAKING ACTION! LOWER REPLACEMENT COSTS!
  Twin 6-bar baskets with rubber-mounted tines (120 per basket) give you up to 25% more raking action than the conventional steel tines, reduce tine replacement costs. Work great in heavier crops, higher moistures or rough terrain.
- FULL HYDRAULIC CONTROLS!
  Raking widths! Windrow widths! Folding/ unfolding and lift systems! Controlled from the tractor. Front-folding baskets squeeze thru nearly any farm gate.
- CAB-MOUNTED R-24 COMMAND CONTROLLER
  Trigger hydraulic lift/fold, and adjust windrow widths and raking widths, from your tractor seat. Basket speed is controlled thru the other hydraulic circuit and a quiet, smooth-running hydraulic motor mounted on each basket.

New, large caster-type gauge wheels with 27 x 9.5 x 15, 6-ply ribbed tires (on the R-24 TwinRake) help cushion the ride, smooth out turns and maintain rake setting as they negotiate changing contour and terrain. No need to re-set tooth height adjustment after transporting to another field. It's already pre-set with easy-to-adjust cylinder stops.

Rubber-mounted tines. More raking action. Reduced tine replacement costs. 120 per basket.

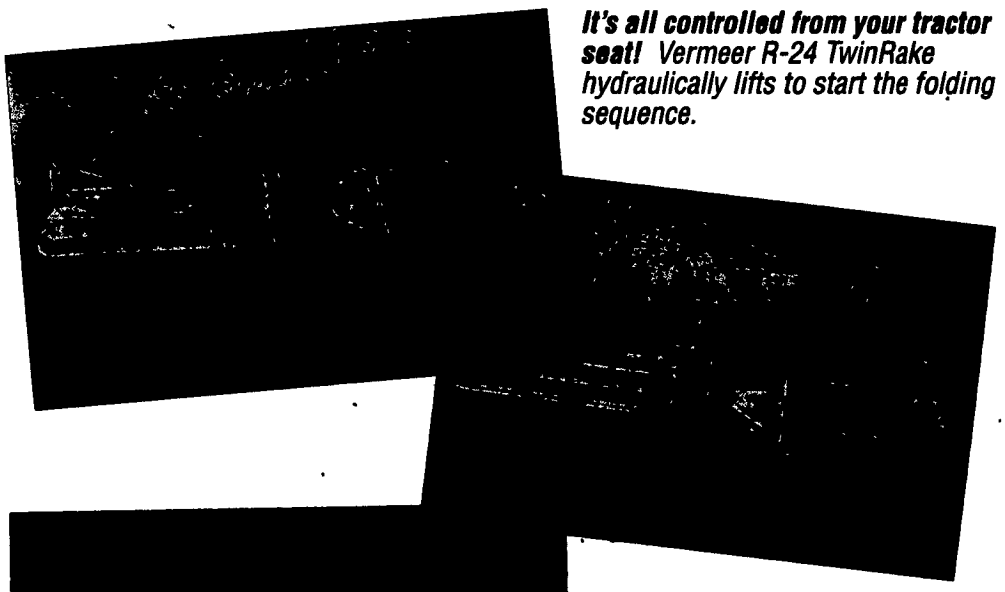
Vermeer R-23 TwinRake. Quiet! Proven! Reliable! Sweeps up 18' to 23' wide. Adjustable raking and windrow widths. Adjustable basket speed control. Mechanical fold.

R-23 TwinRake

Vermeer R-24 TwinRake: From Field To Transport In Seconds! It's Easy! It's All Hydraulic!



It's all controlled from your tractor seat! Vermeer R-24 TwinRake hydraulically lifts to start the folding sequence.

A 2-stage hydraulic system slides telescoping stabilizer/linkage arms along the tongue, drawing the front-folding baskets together.

After the outside baskets are completely folded, they are locked into position on the center post and lifted for transport. It's that simple. You're ready to roll, with just an 8'8" transport width ... in seconds!

Vermeer Side-Delivery Rakes: Extra Muscle & Rakes That Hustle!

Rugged Vermeer R-9 Side-Delivery Rakes really hustle, no matter what the conditions. Choose ground or hydraulic-driven. Rubber-mounted tines (100) give you plenty of positive pickup action (especially important with higher speeds and heavier crops). Sweep it all up — 9-1/2' wide — with a minimum 25 hp tractor.

Vermeer Hydraulic-Fold FingerWheel Rakes!

Large, fluffy windrows for big bales & tight-fisted budgets. Soft, gentle raking action that brings home the leaves.

AND, THEY'RE EASY TO OPERATE!

- Dual rake assemblies respond quickly to contour changes with a smooth floating, pivoting action. Operating speeds up to 14 mph.
- Simple center-mounted fold mechanism hydraulically raises rakes for transport.
- Shock-absorbing suspension springs reduce impact from jolts and excessive ground pressure.
- HD sealed roller bearings for longer wear, less maintenance.
- No need for gears or sprockets! Simple turnbuckle varies fingerwheel angles to handle various crops and conditions.
- Flexible, tightly spaced tines (40 per wheel) gently sweep crop toward the center, into light, fluffy windrows.

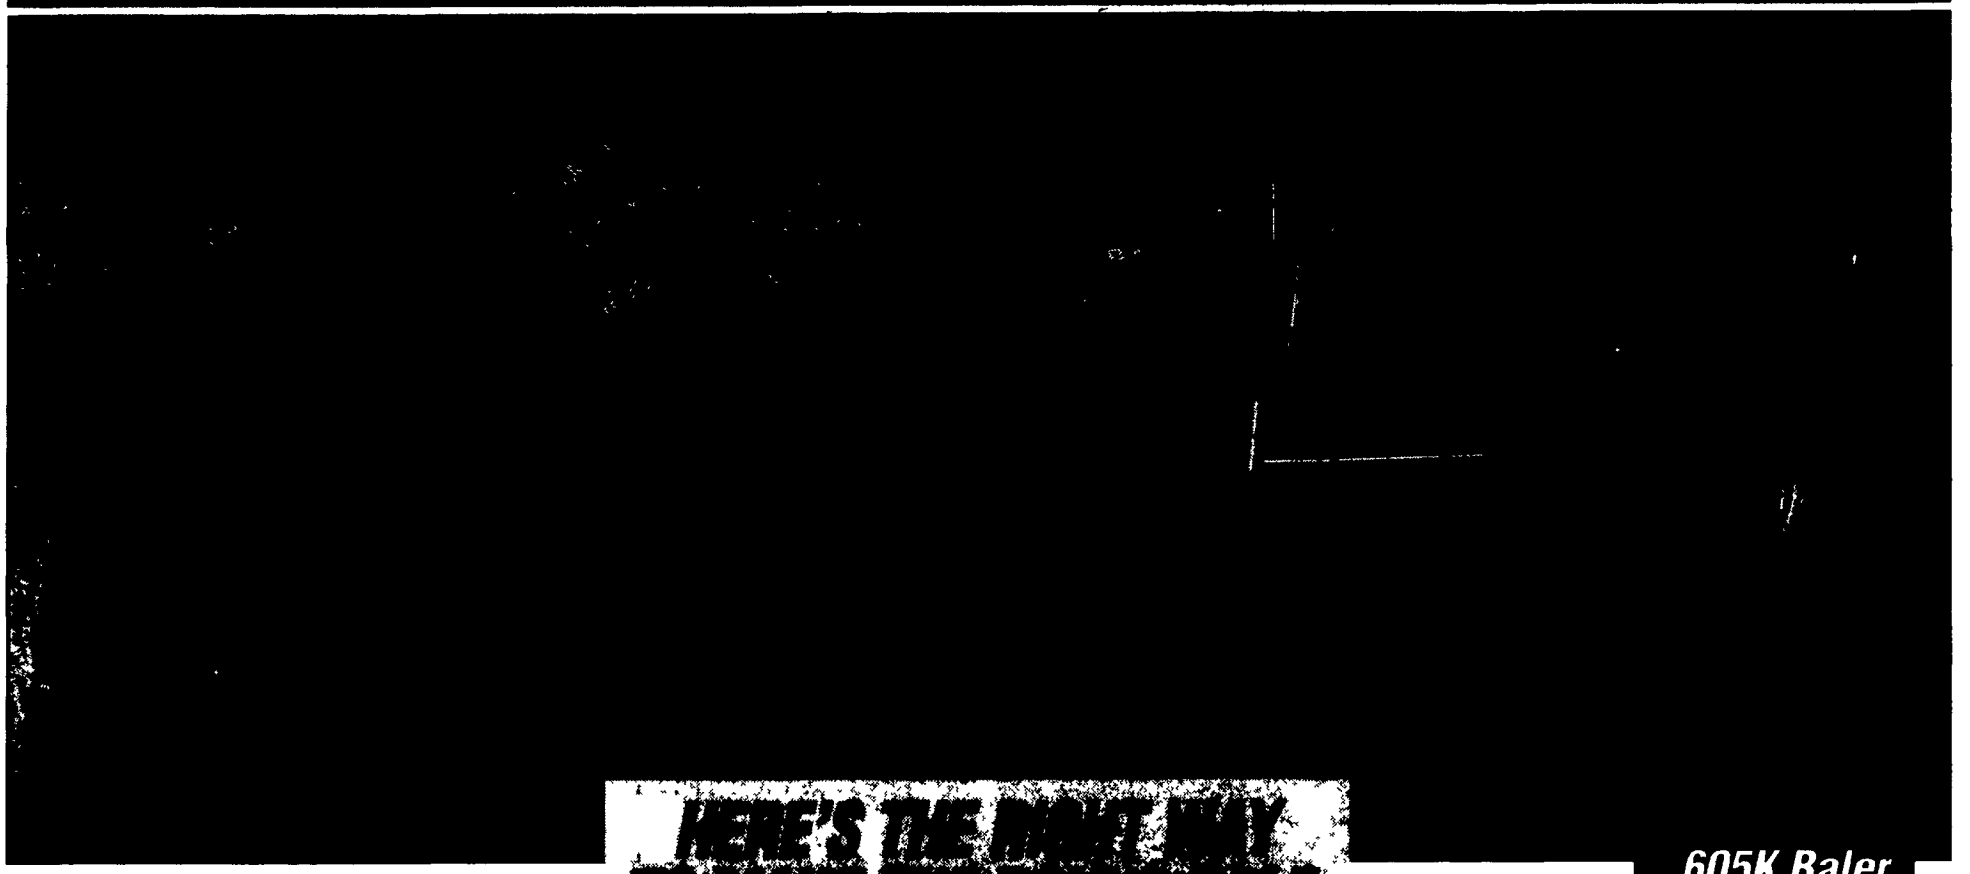
THREE DIFFERENT SIZES TO CHOOSE FROM:
WR20 (8 fingerwheels), rakes a 17'8" to 19'8" swath;
WR22 (10 fingerwheels), sweeps 20' to 22' across;
WR24 (12 fingerwheels), sweeps 23'6" to 25'6" across.
All three units require just a minimum 20hp or 25hp tractor.

Better-looking, better-formed bales?



605K Baler

HERE'S THE BIG WAY TO MAKE THE BEST BALE.

More hay per day?
Tight bales right up to feeding?
The ability to handle higher drive speeds and heavier densities?

Here's how to get them:

- RELIABLE DOUBLE TWINE-TYING SYSTEM! Easy to thread, simple to adjust. Stores six balls of twine. Feeds from both sides.
- AGGRESSIVE, BALE-STARTING DESIGN! 5-bar pickup! Open-throat design! Rubber-mounted pickup tines for better feeding action and lower replacement costs! Spiral starting rollers to reduce wrapping problems! Easy-to-adjust pneumatic hydraulic belt tension.
- STANDARD HAYSAVER WHEELS
- SUPERIOR BOTTOM DRUM ROLLER DESIGN! "Packs" the bale. Allows you to bale faster, in virtually all types of crops and conditions.
- FAST "DROP 'N GO" EJECTION SYSTEM Empty the chamber and start a new bale without disengaging and re-engaging the PTO.
- COMBINATION PNEUMATIC/HYDRAULIC BELT TENSION Densities as tight as you want, from the core to the outside wrap. 36" to 72" diameters.
- BIG DRIVE SHAFTS & IDLERS! DOUBLE LOWER WALL CONSTRUCTION! Reinforced drive system and frame!
- HEAVY-DUTY DOUBLE #60 DRIVE CHAIN For a quieter, smoother-running machine.
- HEAVIER SIDE PANELS, AXLES, BEARINGS! UP TO 30% MORE "IRON"! To handle higher drive speeds and high-density bales. Less wear and tear.
- HEAVY-DUTY SWING-AWAY SIDE SHIELDS Less dirt, dust, debris, noise and maintenance. Less wear and tear on drive systems.
- HD AXLES, 8-BOLT HUBS! HIGH-FLOTATION 13.5 X 15, 6-PLY TERRA-RIB TIRES!

additional pinch point enabling you to pull in more hay and, in some cases, drive a full gear faster while you're baling.

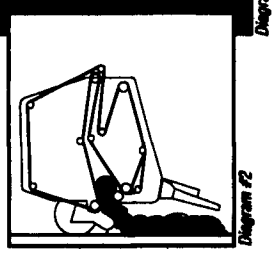

Diagram #2

Smooth-finish, wide belts (Photo #1) also provide 90% belt-to-bale contact, less slippage, less leaf loss and better bales.

It also eliminates the need for the "vertical" forming belts used on other balers!

Vertical chamber balers (Diag. #2) require belts with abrasive, textured surfaces (Photo #2) to start and turn the bale.

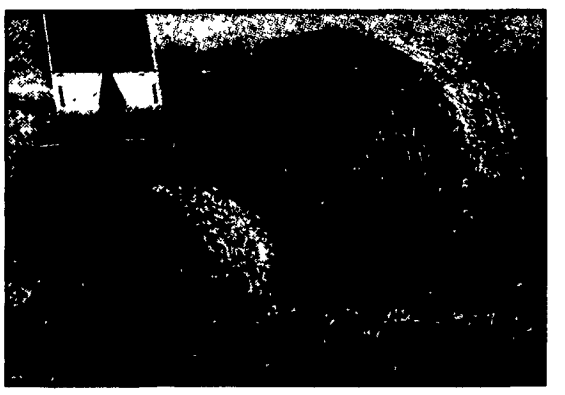
For years Vermeer has out-produced virtually every other round baler in the field, and won virtually every major hay competition in the country, on the basis of both bale weight and density.



"K" Balers put up hay in light, soft-core bales ... or high-density "World Heavyweight Champion" packages that weigh up to 30% more than the competition. Also vary bale diameter — 36" to 72" on both 605K and 604K models.

604K Baler

Plus, the options to make it easy.

Net Wrap! Super time and hay saver for great-looking bales that really hold up during storage and transport! Cuts wrapping time to just two revolutions of the bale. End-to-end coverage with plastic mesh-type wrap traps more leaves and fine crop. Easy to load and operate.

Equal-Fill/AutoTie and Equal-Fill Monitors

Help track bale, weave baler and operate the twine-tying system. Simple. User-friendly. Self-diagnostics speed troubleshooting. Easy programming lets you customize your own control settings.*

Equal-Fill AutoTie Monitor only*

Bale Kicker! Lets you drop the bale without having to back up the baler. Much more dependable than ramp-style assemblies, especially on hilly terrain. Stays extended until the tailgate closes.

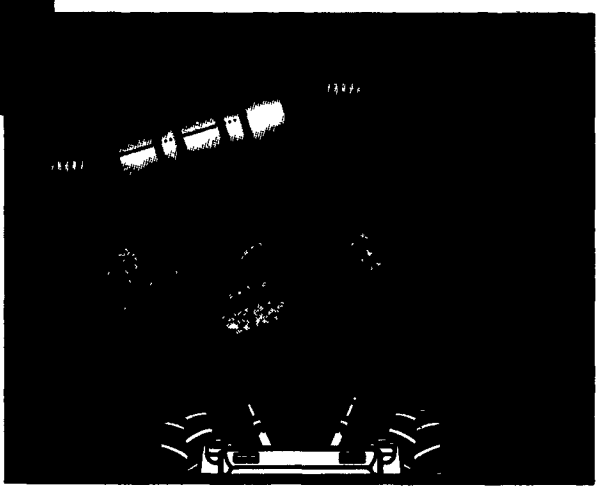
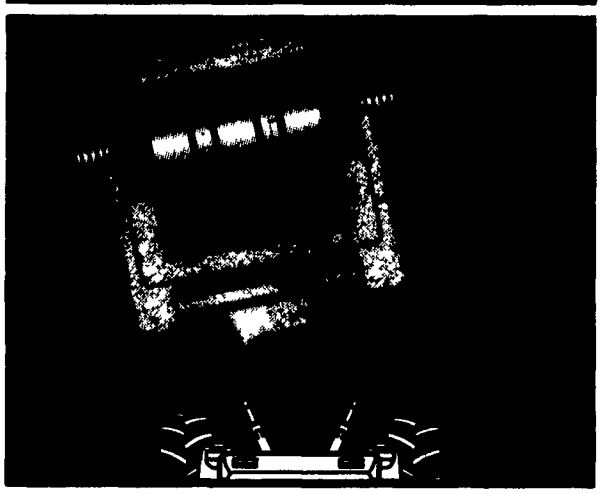
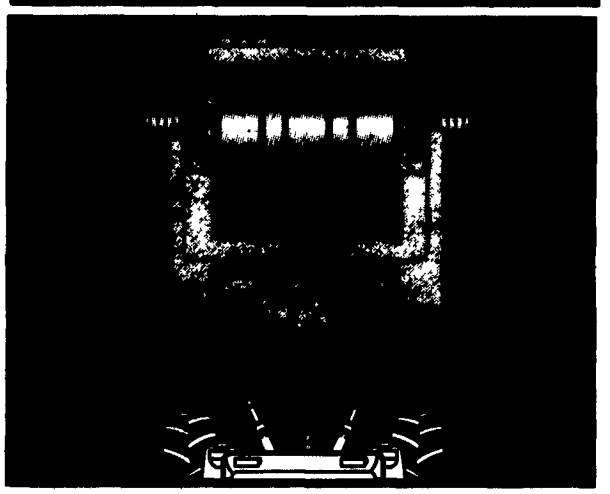
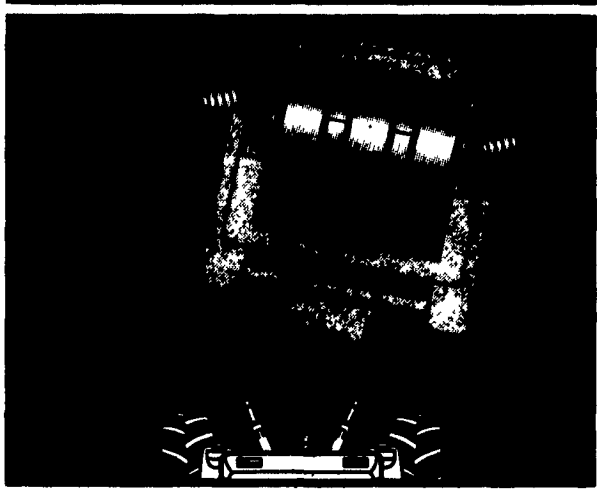
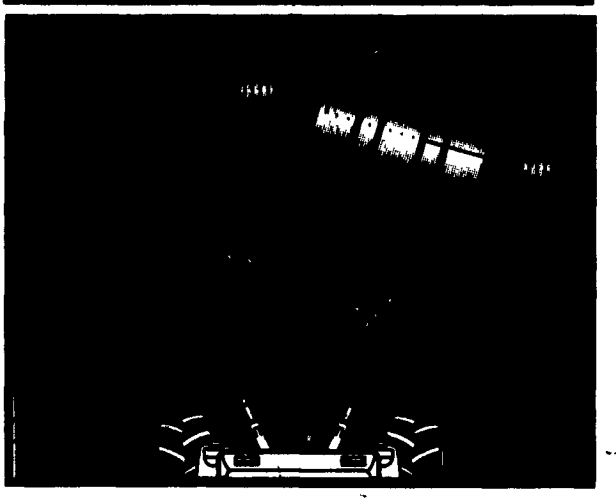
Auto-Weave!











Auto-Weave ... most automated baling option in the field today!

As easy as driving your tractor! No need to weave your tractor back and forth across the windrow! The baler does it for you ... automatically.

Takes the worry and work out of producing top-quality, square-shouldered bales. Eliminates neck and back pain from constantly turning and twisting to monitor bale progress.

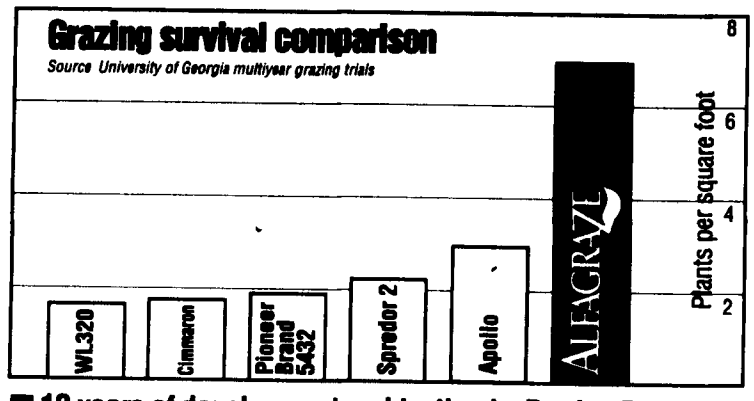
Discover AMERICA'S ALFAGRAZE Alfalfa

Hay it and graze it!



■ 12 years of development and testing by Dr. Joe Bouton at the University of Georgia prove Alfagraze survives grazing better than any alfalfa variety. And because Alfagraze features upright growth, you have the choice to cut it for hay or graze it.

■ Alfagraze lowers feed costs...
"While grazing our 120-cow dairy herd on Alfagraze, we reduced our daily feed costs from $3 a cow to $1.50. Over the next two years we plan to seed another 50 acres of Alfagraze."
— Dane Mercer, Dairyman, Sweetwater, TN

■ Alfagraze yields like conventional hay varieties.

■ Alfagraze has exceptional winterhardiness.

■ Alfagraze is very leafy with fine stems.

ATTRACTIVE GROWTH STOCK

The growth a calf achieves during her first six months will help determine her later income potential as a cow. That's why you need Purina® Calf Startena® and Calf Growena®.

Fortified Startena and Growena feeds have an ideal nutritional balance that can enhance your calves' skeletal and muscle growth while also developing their digestive systems. Those benefits can help your calves reach the recommended six-month growth goals of 400 pounds for heavy breeds and 265-345 pounds for light breeds.

With that kind of a good start from Startena and Growena, records show calves are more likely to breed and begin milking on schedule. That makes them great long-term investments for you. Talk to Purina for details, and watch your stock take off.
